Mary — Trying to find a husband.
Margaret — But you've got one.
Mary — That's the one I'm trying to find.

"Maggie," said Angus to his wife "here's a wee ticket for to-night's conjuring show, and when he comes to that part where he takes a teaspoon o' flour and one egg and makes 20 omelettes, watch verra verra close."

"Why did you give your lodger notice?"

"Well, I'm not one to suspect people or distrust them, but when a man always hangs his hat over the keyhole there's something mysterious."

"There's plenty of time for Joan to think of getting married," said the husband. "Let her wait until the right man comes along."
"I don't see why she should wait that long," answered the wife sweetly. "I didn't."

Grandma — "Well, Richard, what was the score?"

Richard (making due allowance for grandma's lack of technical knowledge) — "Nothing to nothing." Grandma — "Oh, then you needn't have played at all."

The insurance agent asked the prospect: "Did you ever have appendicitis?"

"Well," answered the prospect, "I was operated on, but I have never been quite certain whether it was appendicitis or professional curiosity."

MISCHIEF MAKERS IN SPAIN

Announcement Over The Radio

Hong Kong Daily Press Special
Madrid, July 12.

Shortly after midnight on Saturday, four unknown persons armed with pistols broke into the room of the broadcasting station of Valencia and gave into the microphone a cheer for Fascism, and declared that the Fascist Movement had triumphed. The perpetrators then fled and obliged the Governor to broadcast a short message to quiet the population which believed that a new revolution had broken out. Despite the Governor's reassuring declaration, a crowd consisting of mostly Marxists assembled outside the broadcasting station, waving a Red Flag, and singing the "Internationale," marched through the streets. They broke into the offices of the Valencia Right Wing Party and all furniture were thrown into the street. Fire was also set to the building, but the Fire Brigade arrived in time to quench the flames. The attempts to set fire to the Right Wing party's premises were frustrated by the police.

WAR VETERANS GATHER

Delegations From Many Parts

GERMANS WELCOMED IN FRANCE

(Hong Kong Daily Press Special)
Verdun, July 13.

Twenty thousand French war combatants and delegations of war veterans from 17 other nations, including Germany, which was represented by 500 ex-servicemen led by Captain von Brandis, who led the German troops that first occupied the Fort Duomo in 1916, gathered in the largest demonstration of war veterans since the Armistice at the famous Fort Duomo on Sunday.

While the French delegation was marching to the rally on the sacred road, which during the battle of Verdun constituted the only connection between the fort and the "hinterland," the special train with the delegation of German ex-servicemen arrived at 4 p.m. at the station where the leaders of the French War Veterans Association and groups of members of the German colony in Paris welcomed the war combatants from Germany.

When the German ex-servicemen left the station, marching through the streets in ranks of four, carrying the Swastika Banner of the Third Reich before them, they were accorded a hearty welcome by the inhabitants of Verdun and by the members of the Italian delegation which had arrived but a few minutes before.

Motor buses then brought the German delegation to its quarters, a large hall bearing the inscription "Allemagne." All along the way to their quarters the ex-servicemen had occasion to remark on the friendliness of the population which threw bouquets of flowers into the motor buses. When the Germans arrived at their quarters they were heartily greeted by numerous French war veterans.

A Captain of the French Air Force who had fought in the war placed his car at the disposal of the German delegation for the maintenance of communication between their quarters and the head offices of the meeting.

Inability To Attend Locarno Meeting

(Hong Kong Daily Press Special)
Rome, July 12.

The Italian Government issued the following official announcement explaining why it was unable to see its way to attend the Locarno Conference in Brussels:—
"The Belgian Premier invited the Italian Government to participate at the assembly of the Locarno Powers at Brussels. In its answer the Italian Government confirms the readiness to make a concrete contribution towards assuring peace in Europe, but points out that the existence of certain Mediterranean obligations prevent its participation in the work of international co-operation as it had so keenly hoped."

"The Italian Government has also expressed its view that it would be expedient to invite Germany as well to take part in the delibera-

TRIAL FLIGHT OF NEW BOMBER

Slim Lines And High Speed

"WINGED SUITCASE"

Radlett, June 24.

The latest Handley Page medium bomber, a twin-engined middle-wing monoplane, was flown from the firm's aerodrome here this afternoon. It was finished only three days ago. To-day's was its fourth trial flight. On its next outing it will go to Hendon in readiness for the R.A.F. Display on Saturday. This bomber, known for the present as the H.P.52, is evidently one of the fastest machines in its class. It is also one of the most ingenious in design, one of the cleanest in line and it has smoother wing surfaces than any other new bomber.

The central idea in the design of this aeroplane is an unusually slim fuselage. The idea had its beginning in the Heyford heavy bomber, now serving in large numbers. It was continued in the general purpose monoplane produced by the same firm last year. In the new bomber the fuselage is so slim that there is not sufficient room to set two pilots side by side in the cockpit. Denied breadth in this way, the designer has resorted to depth in the part of the fuselage which may be described as the "business quarters," between the nose and the trailing edge of the wing, and from there to the tail has diminished both breadth and height so that the fuselage ends in a point. The after part is little more than a boom to carry the tail unit.

The effect is like taking a very narrow fuselage and setting a huge suitcase about the forward part of it. That big metal suitcase contains all that is essential to the art of bombing and self-defence and, set on end in this way, probably creates half the drag it were placed on its side. It has another incidental advantage in that it allows the two engines to be closer to each other and to cause less disturbance of flying trim if one should fail. On either side of the centre of this body is the wing, very wide at the roots and tapered sharply towards the tips. This wing uses slots and flaps in the ample fashion which has become necessary with tapered tips and very clean lines.

1,900-HORSE POWER

Two of the latest Bristol Pegasus engines, which yield 950 h.p. each are placed below the leading edge of the wing and fitted with three-bladed airscrews of variable pitch. The engines are wholly enclosed in cowlings and are faired into the wing surfaces with nacelles into which the under-carriage legs may be withdrawn. On the trailing edge of the wing, on each side, are three movable sections, one near the root to serve as a slotted flap, one outwards from it to serve

WOMAN FLIES AT 45,930 FT

MARYSE HILSZ'S WORLD RECORD

Numbed Limbs

Paris, June 23.

Mlle. Maryse Hilsz, the noted French airwoman, this morning beat the world altitude record for women by attaining a height of 45,930 ft.

Mlle. Hilsz, who was flying a Potez 50 plane, took off at 5.11. She climbed rapidly in a comparatively small spiral.

An hour and 20 minutes later she landed and announced that to the best of her knowledge she had beaten the record by a large margin. The recording instruments were immediately removed to Trappes Observatory to be checked.

alternately as flap or aileron, and the third near the tip to do duty as aileron simply. On the outer parts of the leading edge are the automatic slots in two sections. The other control surface consists of twin fins and rudders, widely separated, with a tailplane and two elevators between them. Access to the aeroplane is had through a flap-door in the side of the fuselage.

The behaviour of this bomber in flight was impressive. It took off easily without having the flaps depressed and it landed very slowly. Its speed-range appeared to be wide, the top speed being equal to that of the best fighters at present in use in the squadrons, and its stalling speed being that of a heavy bomber. It handled well and surely. Captain Cordes, the test pilot, turned it sharply, diving it at a fairly steep angle and showed off its fast rate of climb.

THE KING APPROVES A SPECIAL BADGE

For A Famous R.A.F. Squadron's Machines

Army Co-operation, No. 4 Squadron of the Royal Air Force is the first unit to have its Badge approved by the King.

Air Force Squadrons have recently been granted the privilege of using a distinctive Badge on their machines, and a record of each Badge is to be kept at the College of Arms.

The Chester Herald has been appointed Inspector of Royal Air Force Badges, and he has already supplied many which have a particular bearing on the history of each unit concerned.

The design for No. 4 Squadron for example, has the motto "In futurum videre" (looking ahead). This refers to its main role of reconnaissance.

The sun in splendour symbolises "light for the Army"—the black half indicating night reconnaissance. The flash of lightning dividing the red half of the sun from the black half, has two interpretations—speed of action and wireless telegraphy.

NIGHT FLYING PIONEER

These symbols are apt; for the squadron was a pioneer in night flying, and in the days of the Royal Flying Corps, was the first possessor of wireless facilities.

The squadron, one of the oldest and most famous in the Royal Air Force, has been commanded by a succession of brilliant officers, under whom have served some of the most famous pilots.

With a few Breguet and Cody airplanes, the squadron was first raised at Farnborough in September 1912. It was commanded by Major G. H. Raleigh, who took it to France in August 1914 with the first contingent of the British Expeditionary Force to go overseas in the Great War.

In action from the very beginning, the squadron took part in the retreat from Mons. It was Captain G. S. Shephard and Lieutenant I. M. Bonham-Carter, of No. 4 Squadron, who reported the beginnings of the attempt made by Von Kluck's First Army to envelop the left flank of the British Army.

HEROES OF THE MARNE

Again, when the Germans were nearing Paris, the same squadron, reported the change of direction of Von Kluck's Army, which made possible the battle of the Marne, whereby the Allies effectively checked the enemy progress.

No. 4 (AC) Squadron has many battle honours; indeed, it was in action in every great battle which took place on the British Front in France.

After the war the squadron returned to Farnborough, birthplace not only of military aviation, but the scene of many gallant exploits of early pioneers. Colonel Cody used to tether his airplane to a tree there, to secure it against the prevailing winds. The tree still stands in the tarmac—a memory and more.

MOTOR JOTTINGS

CRASHLESS GEAR-CHANGING

The 27 H.P. "Snipe" Humber

Years ago, more than one cares to count up, a once famous maker of cars built one with what I still regard as the ideal plain gear-change—or, at all events, the germ of it, writes John Priorleau. At a time when every car but one had a straight-through change, one gear-notch in front of the next on a plain quadrant, with the lever in the place it occupies to-day on a few of the best cars, on the right of the driver, Darracq gave his customers a gear-change under the steering-wheel.

There was nothing tricky about it, at least nothing more so than in any order of the straight-through changes, but you had the lever where you wanted it, and although I don't suppose anybody attached much value to it in those days of wide bodywork, you had more room for your legs and for entrance and exit. (As there were no doors at the time, this did not matter much.) You went through the usual motions for changing gear, using your clutch in the usual way, and, so far as I remember, you were as successful in getting a quick clean change with the Darracq as with the others—or the reverse.

A CHANCE MISSED

It has always been one of the major mysteries of car-building to me that this admirable design should in the first place have been left to one maker alone, and in the second that it should never have been generally adopted. In all probability it was in its early form pretty experimental with a good deal of the hit-or-miss about it. No doubt there developed play here and there, and there must have been an impressive amount of lost motion in the articulations of those long rods and arms. One can be sure that gear-changing was not always as direct as one might have wished.

What of that? A year or two of careful work and these weaknesses would have been cleaned up. The Darracq would have had a gear-change position in 1904 that is only to be had with two sorts of gears thirty years later. It would, of course, have been widely copied, and—who knows—we might have been spared the central lever which does so much to spoil the comfort of the driver and his companion to day.

A great chance missed for over a quarter of a century. The de Normanville gear-box on the two bigger Humbers, the Eighteen and the Snipe, has the lever over the steering-wheel, and except that it is rather nearer it is the same. The speed-notches, 1, 2, 3, 4, "R" and the extra "C", which is the coaster, follow one another in sequence on a quadrant, and you need not lose all your grip of the wheel to make a change. You can steady the rim with the two fingers and push the lever with your thumb.

There, of course, all resemblance ends. The Darracq was what is called to-day a crash-box, i.e., one without means of helping the hand-handed to avoid making an exhibition of himself and a noise amounting to a nuisance to those within earshot; the de Normanville is uncrashable. If you do the wrong thing, such as trying to change without releasing the clutch (at first it is not easy to remember that this is not a pre-selective gear) you will fall, but you will not advertise your failure with exasperating noises, nor with clipped gear-teeth.

AN EASY, SILENT GEAR

I am not sure that this gear is not the sort I want more than any other. It changes naturally, that is you move the lever into the light notch immediately after you have touched the clutch-pedal. There is nothing to think about, no timing, no delay. The actual change from one gear to another seemed to me about as fast as the engagement of a pre-selective gear.

It is almost noiseless, and the makers claim that it causes no more than two per cent power-loss on top—a very remarkable claim. The only criticism I have to make concerns not the gear but the control. I found that the lever was too long, liable to catch one's cuff when steering round sharp bends.

The new "Snipe" is a bigger and more powerful car than the last (1935) example. The bore and stroke of the six-cylinder side-valved engine have been increased from 80 by 116 to 85 by 120, the cubic content now being a little over four litres—a good-sized engine. The compression ratio has been raised from 8 to 6.4 to 1, and, generally speaking, the power-output has been improved. The maximum speed is claimed to be eighty miles an hour, as against the seventy-four of the old car.

Certainly the acceleration is much improved, and the whole behaviour of the car is more lively. With this goes better braking, due, perhaps, to vacuum servo. Emergency stopping is very satisfactory, and the lightest touch on the pedal will bring the car into measurable control at once. I did not think the steering was as comfortable as last year's. There was not quite the same directness, but, at any

DRIVING TEST DELAYS

Due To Accumulations Since April, 1934

It is a pity that the driving test regulations were ever "antedated" to April 1, 1934. Incidentally, the day and the month are appropriate to the result! The position in many districts to-day is that an applicant for a test has to wait for anything up to two months before he can obtain an appointment with his local examiner. This delay often means that his provisional licence runs out, and has to be renewed at a cost of five shillings, before he can "sit" for his examination.

The provisional licence, by the Road Traffic Act, 1930, is valid for three months, and this time can be extended only by Act of Parliament. It would be uneconomical to engage any more examiners, since the trouble is caused by the accumulated arrears of applicants and not by the regular flow of new drivers. Would it not be possible for these arrears to be cleared off with the assistance of the R.A.C. whose engineering department used, before the tests became obligatory, to do a brisk business in examining candidates for the Club's driving certificate? When the Ministry's examiners were appointed, the R.A.C.'s activities in this direction came to an end, but we see no reason why they should not be revived. The harassed Ministry ought to be grateful for any assistance the Club can render in this emergency.

speed over fifty it was as steady as is necessary. General control would be improved by a wider lock.

COMFORTABLE BODYWORK
The bodywork of the "Sports" saloon is excellent. I have seldom sat in more comfortable and restful seats, particularly in front. The headroom has been raised, and in every way the car is more comfortable. It is, I really believe, the first "sports" saloon I have sat in that has enough room for

ENGINE MADE DEAF DRIVER HEAR SCREAM

A deaf man described at Liverpool recently how he heard the screams of a girl on a runaway bicycle a moment before she collided with the van he was driving. He was Edgar Rawlinson, of Garden-street, Manchester, and when a surprised solicitor asked him how it was he could hear the girl's screams, he replied:—

"I can hear better than you when I am driving my van, owing to the noise of my engine."

The coroner, Dr. G. C. Mort, commenting that Rawlinson's claim was quite justified, said:—

"The continual noise of the engine sets up vibrations in the bound ear-drum which enables a deaf man to hear probably better than you or I. A deaf driver's hearing is made sensitive by a noise which he cannot himself hear."

A RHYME OF ROAD SIGNS

"Sing a Song of Road Signs" is a common start: this is how R. F. W. deals with the catalogue difficulty:—

Sing a song of Road Signs,
Drivers full of care,
Bright Bellata Beacons
Beaming everywhere;
Danger at the Cross Roads,
Trouble at the Bends,
Square Signs, round Signs,
Mute, beapainted friends,
T-Roads, Narrow Bridge,
Major Road, Go Slow,
Level Crossing, Double Bend,
Stop—Caution—GO!
School, Corner, One Way
Street—
What a Highway Code!
So look out for the Road Signs,
And never mind the Road!

a long tour. Perhaps the "sporting" end of it is only in the name. It struck me as a very sensible travelling carriage, with lots of room for four people and their belongings.

through the evening*

After bathing, dust the body over lightly with Cuticura Talcum, and you will find you remain fresh, fragrant and cool throughout the evening. There is a reason for this.

Cuticura Talcum is absolutely pure and is specially medicated with balsamic essential oils. It absorbs perspiration soothes and cools hot, inflamed skin where chafing has occurred. Because of its unusual fineness Cuticura Talcum smooths more evenly over the skin so that its effect is more lasting.

Try it today to appreciate its wonderful "satin" quality. Notice its delightful perfume—a flower-like fragrance that lingers all evening and is itself delightfully refreshing. Sample of Cuticura Talcum, Soap and Ointment sent on receipt of 25 cts. Address, Muller & Phipps (Asia) Ltd., P.O. Box 25 HONG KONG.

THE WONDERFUL HERBAL OINTMENT

IF your skin is sore, injured or diseased, Zam-Buk is the one remedy that can be depended upon to soothe and cure. Smarting pain, soreness and irritation are quickly ended by this famous Zam-Buk ointment. It has powerful (yet perfectly safe) antiseptic properties that destroy poison germs in wounds, sores, abscesses, ulcers, etc. It expels all bad matter and grows new skin.

Zam-Buk is so highly refined that it soaks readily into the pores, purifying and healing in deeper tissues as well as the surface skin. The marvellous soothing and curative powers of Zam-Buk are due to its rare herbal origin, refinement and guaranteed freedom from animal fat. Never be without a box of Zam-Buk.

THE DEFENCE POOL

Reassurance Established Within the Services

BY SIR HERBERT RUSSELL

Contrary to a good many statements which appeared in the Press at the time, there was anything but a general disposition within the Services themselves to welcome the creation either of a Ministry or a Minister of Defence. The former alternative caused considerably more apprehension than the latter. We were told that younger officers in particular warmly welcomed the idea of co-ordination, or co-operation, or combination, whichever you choose to call it, as a rule with a pretty clear implication that they are the people of thought and vision, whereas old officers are merely obstinate, narrow-minded old buffers.

I can quite believe that there was more enthusiasm—so far as the word may be justified at all—in the younger generation than with the older school. For these old buffers are able to carry memory back over a wide span, and to recall that for as long as they can remember this same idea has been not merely discussed, but seriously investigated by administrative authorities, by special committees, and by individuals, and that it has always been abandoned in face of the various difficulties and obstacles which have emerged in the course of diligent inquiry.

Therefore, it was not wholly unreasonable on the part of the old buffers to wonder whether these same difficulties and obstacles still persisted, and whether it is any easier to overcome them to-day than it was twenty or thirty years ago. On the face of it, the prospect did not appear to be rendered simpler by the addition of an entirely new and separate Service and the ceaseless ramifications in the old Services.

REASSURING SELECTION.

When it was announced that a Minister for Co-ordination of Defence had been added to the Cabinet there remained nothing but to suspend judgment and wait and see what he would do. The Prime Minister's references to his functions and powers were both indefinite and limited, because it was impossible to gather just how much or how little his explanations might come to mean in practice.

The choice for the new post was reassuring. An eminent lawyer, who had probably never before even thought about most of the things to which he now had to turn his attention promised two advantages. He could not plunge into a ruthless lap of reform, because he had absolutely nothing ready to put in the place of what he might uproot, and chaos would have been very swift. Also he brought to his task a mind wholly unbiased by any professional bent, so that while he has nearly everything to learn, he is quite unprejudiced by preconceptions and prejudices in learning it. Probably another asset is that he is so accustomed to the ways of counsel that his judgment will be less likely to react to anything in the nature of special pleading.

Within the period of some three months I believe the Minister of Defence has already reached a point at which he is carrying the Fighting Services with him. This, of itself, is a great achievement, and of essential importance to the prospects of the big experiment upon which he is embarking. It would have been so easy to start off with a spectacular tilt, and the anti-brasshat Press would have acclaimed such a beginning with tremendous approbation.

But Sir Thomas Inskip has absolutely disappointed any such expectation. He has made it clear that it is no part of his mission to try and teach the Services their business, but rather to learn their business, at any rate to the extent to which such knowledge is indispensable to his job. Moreover, so far as he has unfolded his ideas, these are much less concerned with upsetting the old than with creating the new. As I see it, his primary role is not to reorganize the Fighting Services for war, but to develop a vast project for "consolidating" all the national resources for war.

AN OVERWORKED TERM.

Concerning that much overworked term "co-ordination," what was the new Minister really expected to do in this direction? The popular idea appears to be that the word is a synonym for amalgamation; that one big show is bound to be more economical to run than three smaller shows; jumble the Fighting Services together under one supreme control—and there you are!

In point of fact, so far as strategical co-ordination is concerned, Sir Thomas Inskip has not found the ground nearly so unprepared as is generally assumed. The Imperial Defence College was opened in September, 1928. The first Commandant was Adml. Sir Herbert Richmond—a most arduous post, for upon him fell the responsibility of giving practical form to the principle upon which the new institution was based. I ventured to ask him what were his ideas upon the subject, and I do not think that at this distance of time there can be any breach of confidence in quoting his reply:

"It is difficult yet to say much about the College, beyond what was stated in the House by Balfour. The object is to study war in its broadest aspects, in the light of the utilization of the Services in common; not merely 'naval operations,' or 'military operations,' or 'air operations'—but war.

"I welcome it as a means of returning to sanity; of preventing such discussions as those about 'invasion' before the war, which was an attempt to rush the country into some form of conscription and change the character of our method of fighting from one maritime to one military, and again, those about the air which now fill so much space with rubbish. If the College can do something to teach the use of the powers the Empire possesses in co-operation, it will not only produce efficiency, but also economy, for as Dizzy said, 'the true parent of economy is efficiency.'"

METHODS AND WEAPONS.

More than 250 senior officers of the Navy, Army, R.A.F., and Overseas Forces have passed through the Imperial Defence College. Of these, many have been, or are, associated with the General Staffs. So, as I have said before, the new Minister of Defence will find that a good deal of soil has been tilled upon the strategical side of co-ordination. This, naturally, reacts on the technical and material side. It stands to reason that the three Services cannot study one another's methods without also studying one another's weapons. Not so very long before his tragic death, Air Marshal Sir Sefton Branker read a paper at the R.U.S.I. in the course of which he declared that four or five aeroplanes could have prevented the losses inflicted by the Emden in the Bay of Bengal. One cannot but feel that had that distinguished officer spent a year at the Buckingham Gate establishment he would never have made such a statement. The presence of aircraft with the warships seeking to catch the Emden would have greatly facilitated their search and probably have much shortened it; this is quite another matter.

AN INEVITABLE ELEMENT.

In this, by far the most important phase of his job, it now seems clear that Sir Thomas Inskip will first of all acquaint himself with what the three General Staffs have to propose on the subject of co-ordination, and differentiate between the lines of harmony and a certain inevitable element of conflict. This, of itself, is going to tax to the full his powers for thinking clearly. But his method of approach is promising. During the debate in which he gave Parliament an account of his brief stewardship, he said that he was now "considering" the question of the battleship.

Of course, what this really means is that he is considering what both the strategical and the technical experts have been considering and experimenting upon long before he ever dreamt of taking an active interest in a subject so very remote from his eminent legal career. He will be wholly dependent upon what they tell him, and because of his frankness in virtually admitting as much, he will get all that they have to give him. Where he will help them after they have helped him is that his much wider authority will enable him to take decisions which no single Service administration could reach on its own account.

THE STAY-IN STRIKE

LEGALITY QUERIED

(Special Air Mail Service)

London June 23.
To-day the Civil Service Clerical
Association is consulting Sir William Jowitt about the legality of Civil servants engaging in a stayin strike.
The threatened stay-in strike is a sequel to the recent agreement signed by Mr. W. J. Brown and the representatives of the Treasury guaranteeing increases of pay amounting to £100,000 per annum to the clerical staff of the Civil Service.

One branch of the Civil Service known as the departmental class was left out of this agreement.
The clerks in this branch, numbering about 7000 and recruited in the same way as other members of the clerical class receive lower rates of pay and a lower maximum salary, and their position has long been recognised as anomalous.

A GENTLEMAN'S AGREEMENT
Before signing his agreement for the clerical class Mr. Brown pleaded the case of the departmental class and obtained from the Treasury the concession that it would agree to central negotiations.

Hitherto the Treasury attitude had been that these departmental clerks, who are confined to a few Government departments of which the Services Ministries are the most important, must negotiate separately with the individual departments.

Central negotiations took place.
The Clerical Association stated its case. The Treasury representative returned to its original argument of separate negotiations.

Mr. Brown considers that this is a breach of the spirit of the original promise. Hence the threatened strike which, if it takes place, will be the first of its kind in this country.

Sir William Jowitt's opinion is not likely to be received before the end of the week, but the present intention is to call out all the clerical staffs and to paralyse Whitehall.

BAGPIPES IN BULGARIA

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 25.
Bulgaria has been introduced to Scottish bagpipes. With the members of the British Legion, who are touring Bulgaria, and have been received by King Boris, is a piper of the Gordon Highlanders.

The other day, at the house on the shores of the Black Sea of M.
Stancloff, the former Bulgarian Minister in London, he was invited to play, and the compliment was returned by a Bulgarian piper of the Varna garrison.

The Bulgarian pipes resemble the Scottish, but are more primitive. They are an ancient tradition in Bulgarian mountain life, and the piper is one of the most important men in the village.

SECOND AIRWOMAN C.B.E.

Miss Jean Gardner Batten, who is now a Commander of the Order of the British Empire, is the second woman to win that distinction by her skill in aviation. Mrs.
Mollison's great flight to Australia won it for her six years ago. Miss Batten was educated in New Zealand and came to this country to qualify for her air pilot's licence, gaining both the 'A' and 'B' certificates. She was the first woman to fly non-stop solo from England to Rome, and she also made a spectacular solo flight from Britain to India over three years ago.

A valuable educational link between the secondary schools of Britain and ships of the mer-

It is a curious fact that the number of ships which have expressed a preference to be associated with schools in Scotland is likely to exceed the number of schools available.

FRISCO KID

Twelve hundred vigilantes in flowery waistcoats and top hats, black sombreros, gay frocks and rough mining clothes of another generation, took possession of Warner Bros. studio for a night for a scene in "Frisco Kid," now showing at the Star Theatre.

Accompanied by their women-folk in hoop skirts and crinolines, the men came to carry out an old time California custom—that of hanging a couple of objectionable citizens and putting the torch to a notorious den on Barbary Coast.

The macabre scene is a high-light in "Frisco Kid." Four motion picture cameras mounted on scaffolding filmed the seething, howling mob as it overflooded replicas of several blocks of old San Francisco's waterfront, armed with ugly bayoneted rifles and lurid yellow torches.

A crew of several hundred electricians, grips, property men, wardrobe and make-up workers, assistant directors, were on the scene. But these were augmented by such a crowd of curious sightseers, the scene being taken in downtown Los Angeles, that police and firemen were called to keep order.

Shooting of the scene began at six o'clock in the evening and was not completed until four in the morning.

James Cagney heads the cast of this thrilling drama of the lawless but picturesque days of San Francisco in the early '50's. Others include Margaret Lindsay, Ricardo Cortez, Lili Damita, Donald Woods, Barton MacLane, George E. Stone and Robert McWade.

"SANDERS OF THE RIVER"

"Sanders of the River" is without doubt one of the most thrilling films which has ever been put on the screen, just as the original Sanders stories were as thrilling as anything which that master-thriller, Edgar Wallace, ever wrote. They were, in fact, Wallace's favourite stories, and he considered them his best although they were among his earliest.

The reason for their suggestion of absolute authenticity which gives them their thrilling quality is not far to seek. Wallace wrote them from his own observation when, as a young man, he was working in central Africa. That is why his characters and atmosphere are so real and vivid; even Wallace could not have drawn such characters after merely reading travel books.

A popular belief is that Wallace started on his Sanders series whilst serving with the punitive expedition of 1897 that ended with the capture of the mysterious walled city of Benin.

This if you read your history books, was a reprisal for the treacherous assassination of an unarmed party of eighteen Englishmen.

But, according to C. B. Cotterell who was in the Nigerian Political Service this was not the whole truth.

At that time, he says, Wallace was a corporal in the Royal Army Medical Corps, part of a detachment which was landed on

SENTIMENTS MISUNDERSTOOD

National Constitution, Laws Disregarded

Tokyo, July 7.

Sixteen Army officers and a civilian have been sentenced to death, and five other officers have been given terms of life imprisonment for participation in the events of February 26, when several Army groups rebelled and assassinated several high government officials, it was announced to-day. The sentences followed weeks of painstaking investigation and a trial surrounded by the greatest secrecy, conducted by a special court—presumably at the Yoyogi parade grounds.

In a 20,000-word statement, the war Ministry presented the findings of the Court Martial on the motives of the rebels, and a summary of the case.

"There is ground for understanding the pure sentiments of concern for the fate of the nation and the state of society at a time of national crisis held by officers, former officers and leading civilians among the accused," said the statement, "as there is also room for realization of the various circumstances that led some of the accused to take the actions with which they were charged."

"However, they ran counter to Imperial commands in their acts, followed a path contrary to reason and right, disregarded the national Constitution and the laws of the land and, moreover, impaired the basic principles of the founding of the Army by leading into acts of rebellion by devious means official troops which, under no circumstances, should take action without Imperial command."

"Their crimes," the statement goes on, "are indeed heavy and grave and therein lies the reason for the sentences passed."

TRAINED TO OBEY

"A few of the non-commissioned officers who were found guilty had organized into groups and staged an armed rebellion. These men have been regarded as active participants in the rebellion, in contrast to others who reluctantly took part in the mutiny, having been trained to obey the commands of their superior officers."

"These reluctant rebels had no alternative but to obey their superior officers and are now deeply repentant. For this reason, their sentences were made conditional on their good behaviour."

"These non-commissioned officers and privates who joined the rebels' ranks in the belief that they could not disobey the command of their superiors were acquitted," the statement said.

MOVE TO OVERTHROW PRIVILEGED

The official analysis of the causes of the uprising declared that the leaders were motivated by "a keen realization of the necessity to effect a national reform by drastic means so as to make manifest the true aspect of the Japanese Em-the West Coast, in support of the Expeditionary column.

Edgar Wallace remained at the base, says Cotterell, and did not accompany the little force which disappeared into the dense forest in search of the city of brass and ivory, with its palace of an ebony despot whose name was death over all that part of Africa.

Human sacrifice was then an everyday affair. Hundreds of people were killed each year at the religious orgies of these natives.

Nevertheless, the atmosphere of the Niger Delta and the slight contacts with the furtive creek-dwellers fired Wallace's ever-watering imagination.

The R.A.M.C. corporal saw the prisoners with their sharply filed teeth and horrible trophies dangling at their throats.

Later, however, when he became a special correspondent for a newspaper, Wallace was sent into the Congo area at the time of the trouble on the Belgian Congo rubber plantations. Here, according to his own words, he absorbed "the sights and sounds as blotting paper absorbs water."

"How much has Wallace exaggerated things?" asks Cotterell. "Was there a real Bosambo?"

The answer is that throughout his stories he keeps very closely and very faithfully to the real thing. Here and there he has added a touch of fiction and nowhere can it be said that the bounds of possibility have been passed. There is the ring of truth in every foot of the Sanders film at the King's Theatre to-day.

pire by overthrowing the privileged classes."

These included, according to the communiqué, the elder and senior statesmen, the bureaucrats, leaders of the various military cliques, the political parties and the rich, who, the insurgents believed, were responsible for the straitened circumstances now confronting the nation.

Such groups were also held guilty by the rebels of the alleged infringement of the prerogative of supreme command held by the Emperor because of the parts they are said to have played in obtaining Japan's signature to the London Naval Treaty, in spite of the opposition to the pact of the naval members of the Supreme Military Council.

"BLOOD BROTHERHOOD CONSPIRACY"

"The Court martial's findings indicate that defendants were influenced by the so-called 'Blood Brotherhood Conspiracy,' leading to the assassinations in the spring of 1932 of Mr. J. Inoue, Finance Minister, and of Mr. T. Dan, chairman of the board of trustees of the Mitsui Co.; the subsequent May 15 Incident when naval and military cadets murdered the then Premier, Mr. T. Inukai, and the slaying, on Aug. 12 last year, of Lieut.-Gen. Nagata, by Lieut.-Col. Aizawa, an associate of the cashiered officers who participated in the rebellion, into taking direct action to achieve their objectives."

From December last, when it was first reported that the First Army Division would be sent to Manchukuo, to Feb. 26, the judges' report read, the leaders of the revolt held five conferences, both inside and outside barracks. Civilian members of the plot also participated in these deliberations.

Early in the morning of Feb. 26, the judges declared, the rebel leaders mustered their men under emergency orders and took them from their barracks announcing that they were going on a pilgrimage to the Meiji Shrine, and the Yasukuni Jinja, the Soldier's Shrine.

SIX-POINT PROGRAMME

On the eve of the outbreak, the leaders in the movement, the court said, received from "a certain Kamakura" the necessary funds and decided on a plan of attack against Cabinet Ministers, elder and senior statesmen as well as Government institutions, which they intended to seize.

When their coup had been carried out, the rebels intended, according to the judges, to follow a six-point programme.

Under this, they were to urge the War Minister to "save the situation" by effecting drastic reforms; to arrest those whom the rebels held responsible "for destroying military discipline"; to eliminate the leaders of the military cliques; to hold conferences with sympathizers from the provinces; to hold Government buildings until their demands had been accepted and to prevent, at all costs, fighting with other troops.

The court revealed that the insurgents, after the coup, had held conversations with Gen. Y. Kawashima, Minister of War; Lieut.-Gen. M. Furusho, Vice-Minister of War; Gen. J. Mazaki, whose removal from the post of Inspector-General of Military Education was held to be the primary cause for the murder of Lieut.-Gen. Nagata, and others, but had failed to listen to the persuasion of these military leaders to return the rebel troops to their barracks.

"When, however, an Imperial order was issued commanding the soldiers to return to their quarters, the leaders of the rebellion, the judges said, told their followers to give up."

A suicide pact was entered into by the chief conspirators, but dissention among them prevented the agreement being carried out, with the exception of one who shot himself at the Sanno Hotel, the last stronghold of the mutineers. All the others were arrested.

OTHERS SENTENCED

Five officers, apart from those sentenced to death, were given life imprisonment; and another was given four years' penal servitude.

Prison terms ranging from 18 months to 15 years were returned against 44 former non-commissioned officers. Of this number, 27 sentences, providing for imprisonment for less than two years, were made conditional, for a term of three years.

Three-year probationary sentences, ranging between 18 months and two years, were given to three privates. Five civilians were each given 15-year goal terms, while another was sentenced to a ten years' imprisonment.

Before passing sentences, the Court Martial examined the cases of one officer; 29 officers deprived to their rank, two of whom committed suicide before the trial; three cadets; two non-commissioned officers; 89 cashiered non-commissioned officers; 1,358 privates and ten civilians.

Indictments were returned against one officer; 18 cashiered officers; two non-commissioned officers; 73 cashiered non-commissioned officers; 19 privates and ten civilians.

Captain Hisashi Kohno, Air Force, who led the attack upon the residence of Count Nobuyuki Makino, former Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, shot himself at the Atami Hospital on March 5, dying the following day.

FULL COURT OF APPEAL

ARBITRATORS' AWARD QUERIED

BUILDING CONTRACT SEQUEL

The Full Court of Appeal, comprising the Chief Justice, Sir Atholl MacGregor and the Acting Puisne Judge, Mr. Justice J. J. Hayden sat yesterday to hear an appeal and cross appeal against the decision of Mr. Justice R. E. Lindell, in connection with an award by arbitration brought by the Sze Tung & Co., and Li Yik Yin respectively.

Mr. H. C. Macnamara, instructed by Mr. C. E. R. Sanderson, of Messrs. Russ & Co., appeared for the Sze Tung & Co., while Li Yik Yin was represented by Mr. Leo D'Almada, Jr., instructed by Mr. G. S. Hugh-Jones, of Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist.

The appeal arose from an award by Messrs. Chau and Lee, architects and arbitrators for both parties, giving damages to Li for delay in work on a building contract. The appellants were not satisfied and came before Mr. Justice Lindell who, however, upheld the arbitration. They now asked the Court to reverse the decision.

The cross-appeal was that so much of the decision of Mr. Justice Lindell as related to the implied authority given to the arbitrators by the appellants to award damages, etc., should be varied, namely that the appellants impliedly authorised the arbitrators to award damages for delay and that inasmuch as no objection to the arbitrator's jurisdiction was taken by the appellants on or before the arbitration, they waived their rights (if any) in respect thereof.

ARBITRATION QUESTION

Opening his appeal, Mr. Macnamara said that the present proceedings were due to a building contract made in 1932. It had given rise to a certain amount of litigation which had been brought to a close, and the only point left was the award made by the architects, purporting to be under Clause 4 of the contract.

The point which he asked the Court to rule in his favour was that the dispute which was settled by arbitration did not come under the provisions of the clause.

Counsel then read the clause which stated: "The architects shall be the absolute judges as to the quality and sufficiency of all materials and workmanship and of the adequacy of the number of workmen employed on the work, as to the value of the work executed and materials supplied and as to the true intent and meaning of this specification. In those and in all other respects, they shall act as arbitrators between the parties of this contract and their decision shall be final and without appeal."

Continuing, Counsel said that what the particular dispute was could be discovered from a letter written by Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist to Messrs. Chau and Lee, in which it was mentioned that damages should be awarded in the delay in constructing a building at Kowloon Inland Lot No. 85.

He was not going to argue that that clause applied to the whole contract, but what he wanted to stress was that before it could be invoked the Court must have a genuine dispute as to the meaning of the contract itself.

Counsel then directed the attention of the Court to Clause 15 of the contract, which stated: "The whole works shall be completed to the satisfaction of the architects on or before March 2, 1933 with an allowance for rainy weather to be made by the principal. In default thereto the contractor shall forfeit a sum of $20 a day for every day the work is delayed or not completed beyond the above mentioned period, which sum the said principal may, with the concurrence of the architects, deduct from monies in hand, not as a penalty but as liquidated and agreed damages."

TIME DIFFICULTY

As to the terms of the contract both parties agreed on it, and the only difference was how many days had elapsed after the date for the completion of the building. This however did not come under the provision of the arbitration clause and therefore the arbitra-

ASSAULT CHARGE

AMERICAN IS CONVICTED

A. C. Phipps, aged 30, a cook of the s.s. Tulsa was fined $100 yesterday at the Central Court by Mr. W. Schofield in answer to the charge of assaulting Leung Kam-shing, 44, a motor boat man in Gloucester Road on July 9.

Defendant stated that if he did anything he was not responsible. Complainant stated that his boat was engaged by the defendant and a friend to take them back to their ship. The engine had been started and the complainant was struck on the head from the rear with a bottle by the defendant. Complainant fell into the water and the defendant jumped after him. Complainant swam ashore and made a report to the Police.

A friend of the defendant said that he tried to stop the attack. Defendant was ordered to pay $10 towards the complainant and was fined a further $100.

PAID NO WAGES

STOLE IN RETURN

Because he had not received his wages, Lam Hoi, 18, a fooki stole an electric fan and three cotton quilts from an accountant of the Kum Toi Hotel, Nathan Road. At the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, Detective Sub-Inspector R. Cunningham told Mr. Macfadyen that the fooki of the hotel had not received their wages for the past month, as the place was bankrupt.

Accused admitted stealing and said his intention was to pawn the fan and quilts.

Binding the accused over in a personal bond of $75, the Magistrate said that Lam would receive money from the Poor Box to pay his fare back to the country.

For the benefit of the other fooki at the hotel, a word of warning was issued from the Bench against a repetition of this type of thing.

tors had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter.

That as long as there was reference to arbitration, it was well within the powers of the arbitrators to deal with the facts relevant to the case was the contention put forward by Mr. D'Almada. Continuing, Counsel said that if there were in fact no dispute as to the meaning of Clause 15, there was at least the position in which the parties had been at variance for some time upon matters generally. The general intention of the parties was that the architects as arbitrators should have the widest powers possible so that they could be the sole arbitrators in matters arising between them, and therefore they could deal with any dispute so long as they arose from the contract. From the correspondence and indeed from the whole contract and throughout the proceedings it was clear that both parties thought the arbitrators had jurisdiction and treated them as having it.

Dealing with the cross-appeal, Counsel said that if in fact under clause 4 of the contract the arbitrators had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter, nevertheless they were impliedly authorised to do so by both parties.

Where the learned trial judge went wrong was in holding that this was a waiver solely and not a question of implied authority. Counsel submitted that the objection to the arbitrators' jurisdiction should have been taken at the arbitration and not after, and could not therefore be argued at this stage by the appellants.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

Because it concerned only the question of time in completing the building, Mr. Macnamara said that the dispute dealt with by the arbitrators did not come under the provisions of the arbitration clause when replying to Mr. D'Almada's contention.

Referring to the cross-appeal, Counsel said that it was not possible to get rid of the term waiver by merely calling it implied authority. It could only be done if the Court found Messrs. Russ and Co. waived the point in the sense that, knowing that the point was available to them, they did not take it up before the arbitration. This point, however, did not occur to Messrs. Russ and Co. at the time; it was only after Judgment was reserved.

A JILTED LOVER

DEATH INQUEST ON A YOUNG WOMAN

A Last Request

A poignant last request from a dead woman for the redress of her wrongs was related in the Central Court yesterday. A young woman who, after being preyed upon by a false lover for her money and jewellery and discarded when these were exhausted, ended her sad life by self-administered opium poisoning.

"After my death, please report the matter to the Government and seek some way of redress for me," was the message given by her friend at the inquest held yesterday before Mr. W. Schofield as Coroner.

The jury composed of Messrs. A. M. Larcina (foreman), Cheung Wing-sing, and Lau Tai-ling. Inspector A. E. Carey represented the Police.

Mr. Schofield said that the inquiry was to be held into the circumstances surrounding the death of Chan Kwai-chi, a female aged 20, living at 45, Village Road. Dr. G. H. Thomas stated that on June 10 at 11.30 p.m. a young Chinese female, later identified as Chan Kwai-chi, was admitted to the Government Civil Hospital unconscious. Her symptoms suggested some sort of narcotic poisoning. Her stomach was washed out and she was treated for opium poisoning. She died at 4.45 a.m. the following morning.

A post-mortem was held the following day and death was attributed to opium poisoning, which in the absence of marks of violence, was adduced to have been self-administered.

A "DON JUAN"

The next witness was Yeung Kam-shan, amah, who stated that the deceased had been kidnapped and taken to Yunnan. On her way back again she met a relative of Shu, her employer. She was persuaded to work for the Shu family, which she did for four years. During these four years deceased and another servant were often sent to the Tin Yat Garage to hire cars and it was there that she got to know Lau Sui, a motor driver. Lau thereafter often came to the house and took these two girls to the theatre. Another girl had previously fallen in love with Lau and had drawn her savings from witness, who kept them for her, and had used them on Lau. After these savings were gone Lau jilted her and had fallen in love with the deceased.

The deceased also had savings with witness and she also drew them and left the Shu family, on Lau's instigation, in October, last year. A cubicle was rented at No. 45, Village Road. Lau and the deceased went to Canton and after a few days returned and stayed at this house together. They were not married and all the deceased's ornaments and money had been given to Lau.

In March, this year, Lau gave her up and did not provide money for her maintenance. This was told to witness by the deceased herself. The deceased often went to the Tin Yat Garage and asked Lau to return her all her money. For this she was scolded by Lau and his mother.

On June 10 deceased went to witness about 2 p.m. and said that she could not stand the words of Lau and his mother and that she was going to end her life. She had said that Lau's mother had called her a prostitute and that they were not going to keep her, and further that she could go and end her life by either poison or by jumping into the harbour. Deceased said that she had made up her mind to die and that witness would see her no more. At the time deceased was very depressed and was crying and said "after my death please report the matter to the Government and seek some way of redress for me."

LAU THE CAUSE

Deceased further said that Lau Sui was the only cause of her death and as she regarded witness as a relative, implored her to try and seek redress for her grievances.

Witness said that she told the deceased that she could make a complaint and that it was useless to end her life. Deceased replied that she did not know how and that she could not get on as she had no money. She wept bitterly and then left the house.

Witness then confided this matter to another amah and they decided to send someone to the deceased's house but it was then found out that she had already taken the poison and had been

Around the Courts

CONFIDENCE TRICK

A new type of confidence trick was revealed at the Central Magistracy before Mr. C. B. Burgess today when Chang Wing, 26, was charged with having obtained $3 from Lam Kin, a woman, by false pretences.

Sergt. Folkington said that on January 16 the woman boarded the Sui Tai, bound for Macao, and met Chang, who told her that the export of silver dollars was forbidden and that if she had any, he would take care of them until the police had searched the ship. She gave him three silver dollars but did not see him again until Saturday when she asked him for their return. He attempted to run away but was caught by her husband. Sentence of two months in prison was imposed.

LARCENY CHARGES

A fine of $25, in default, a month's imprisonment, was imposed by Mr. Burgess at the Central Magistracy yesterday on Tung Cho, 31 for the larceny of seven receipt books belonging to European firms. Sgt. Gullid said Tung spoke very good English and described him as a "scalliwag whose father would have nothing to do with him."

COUNTERFEIT COINS

At the Central Magistracy yesterday, Lai Hing-choi, 32, barber, was remanded for a week on a charge of the possession of 299 counterfeit 10-cent coins. Sergt. Shepherd told Mr. C. B. Burgess that the case was one for committal.

HEROIN PILLS

At the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday Li Lam, 30, unemployed was charged with possession of heroin pills at No. 209 Fa Yuen Street, second floor. The quantity of pills involved was stated to be 20,000. Revenue Officer Major applied for the prosecution. The case was formally remanded.

JAPANESE CHARGED

Nikwateri Kaml, aged 32, a Japanese who was charged on Saturday at the Central Court with entering the Colony without a valid passport, appeared on remand yesterday and was found guilty. He was also charged with failing to register within the specified period after arrival.

Inspector Nolloth said that the defendant came on a junk. As a seaman a passport was not necessary, but should he decide to reside then he must have a passport and registration must be taken out.

Defendant was fined $50 on the first charge and $25 or two weeks on the second.

removed to the Hospital. This was on the same day sometime after 10 p.m.

Witness then said that besides some $200, deceased had a gold chain and three gold rings which she had not been seen to wear since she had left the Shu family. The next witness, Lee Yee, an amah, corroborated the previous evidence and stated that she had visited the deceased at her cubicle at No. 45, Village Road. This witness had identified the body at the Mortuary.

Lau Kit-shun, a tailor at No. 45, Village Road, gave evidence of hearing the trouble between the deceased and Lau's mother at the house.

Lee Sui-chun, wife of the previous witness, corroborated the evidence of the trouble between the deceased and Lau's mother and said that she had heard the mother say to the deceased that she could throw herself into the harbour. After the verbal fight, the mother left the house. The deceased also went out and returned sometime in the evening when it was dark. After a short stay she again went out for a short time and returned and this time went into her cubicle and with the door open, lay down on her bed.

The deceased then complained of giddiness and remained giddy until she was unable to talk. Witness procured some oil and rubbed it on to deceased's head, but did not ask what the trouble was about. When the girl became unconscious, witness sent for Lau Sui, who arrived and took her to the Hospital. She had never mentioned to witness that she intended to commit suicide.

At this point the hearing was adjourned until 2.30 on July 22.

ASSAULT CHARGE

Mario Gill, 18, clerk, of No. 18 Granville Road, third floor, appeared on remand before Mr. H. Himsforth at the Kowloon Magistracy charged with assault against Yan Wong, 29, matched fooki, and Lau Yee Hoi, student, at Tai Wan Bathing Beach on July 4.

Mr. M. A. Silva appeared for the defence. The case was remanded till Friday at 2.30 p.m.

OBSTRUCTION CHARGE

For obstructing the police by giving a hawker warning of the approach of the police, So Shing, 40, stall assistant, was fined $30, in default imprisonment for a month, by Mr. C. B. Burgess at the Central Magistracy yesterday.

TO BE EXPELLED

Ghulam Mohamed, 22, was charged before Mr. Burgess at the Central Court yesterday with entering the Colony without a valid passport.

An expulsion order was made against the defendant.

DAMAGING TREES

Lau Wu, 29, unemployed, was charged at the Central Court yesterday with cutting and damaging two fir trees on the Hong Kong University grounds.

Sergt. Sullivan stated that complaints had been made to the Vice-Chancellor and a watch was set. The defendant was arrested as a result.

Defendant was fined $50 or six weeks.

BIRCHING FOR SNATCHER

Wong Chui, 30, unemployed, appeared on remand before Mr. Burgess at the Central Court yesterday charged with the larceny from the person of Mrs. Tam Siu-yi, of a handbag containing a jade ring and a jade bangle in Caine Road.

Defendant was sentenced to six months in addition to 20 strokes of the birch.

CHARGE NOT PROVED

Obtaining Money By False Pretences

Lai Chick Nam was discharged at the First Kowloon Court, before the Magistrate, Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen yesterday afternoon.

The defendant was first brought before the court last Saturday on the charge of obtaining money under false pretences by collecting school fees from four persons, but the case was remanded until yesterday.

The first complainant was a woman, Tsui Luk, 62, Pelio Street, 1st floor. She stated that one day in April this year, between the 11th and 20th defendant collected $2 for school fees. She later got a receipt, but it had since been burned. She was unable to recognise any of the receipts on exhibition.

Ng Shum, an accountant of the Leung Yue Tea Shop, 108, Keelung Street, next deposited that about a month ago the defendant collected fees for the tuition of his 9-year-old son. $3 was paid, but the defendant returned the following day with a receipt for $4, whereupon he paid the extra dollar. On the dismissal of the complainant from the witness box, Mr. Macfadyen said, "Never, at any time, has there been any pretence made at all."

The officer prosecuting, Det-Sergt. F. Forrest, replied to his Worship that the other complaints were of a similar nature. Mr. Macfadyen answered that all the evidence should be heard.

The third complainant, Lee Tai, a woman pig breeder and vegetable gardener, residing at 92, Tainan Street, 2nd floor, was next in the witness box. She said that some time in May or June, she paid $3 to the defendant.

The last complainant was Yip Yau Mui, a woman residing at the same address, who was also a pig breeder. Her evidence as to dates was as unreliable as the others. She said that she gave the defendant $5 for school fees for her child. She added that the defendant claimed that a Mr. Yeuk of the Yik Tan School asked him to collect the fees.

Mr. Macfadyen said that the dates had not been proved, and there were no charges proved. Therefore, the defendant was discharged.

A VISIT TO THE POLICE TRAINING SCHOOL

Value Of Practical Demonstration

RECRUITS' CURRICULUM

(BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT)

The training of a recruit from England and the subsequent part he takes in the organisation of the Hong Kong Police Force was explained to me by Chief Inspector F. W. Shaftain, Principal of the Police Training School, when I visited the School a few days ago.

The sun was shining bright when I arrived at the Principal's office shortly before 9.30 a.m. On entering the room I found Inspector Shaftain drawing at his pipe; at the same time running his eye through a file which was one of many lying in front of him.

No time was wasted. The general Principal greeted me and we were soon down to business for I was there to get an insight of Police training and to have a look round the building.

I very soon learned that much of the Police Force work, specially drafting of regulations, devolves on the Principal of the School. His duties, in fact, are multifarious to put it shortly.

Inspector Shaftain handed me a type-written paper which detailed the training of European, Chinese and Indian recruits.

"In addition to teaching regulations and ordinances one of the principal objects is to teach observation," the Principal told me as he put down his pipe and sent a messenger to buy his favourite cigarettes. "For example, a man may suddenly be asked how many staircases are in the stairway leading to his quarters on the first floor. Then, in addition, we also have practical demonstrations. We stage a crime and go through the whole process of investigation and Court procedure as in the Police. Certain men, as detectives, are detailed to make enquiries, statements are taken and eventually the whole case is worked up. We then use a room as a Court room and hold a trial with myself as the judge. Evidence is taken in exactly the same way as it would be in a Police Court. In many cases we detail a man to work up a case which means getting evidence and then, if he is wrong in his evidence which he places before the Court, the errors are pointed out to him."

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE
"The question of vital importance is that of circumstantial evidence," the Principal said. "It is pointed out to the recruits that even human witnesses often lie but circumstances do not and cannot lie. The question of connecting links in circumstantial evidence, such as in murder, robbery and other serious crimes, is explained to them and examples demonstrated."

"By practical demonstrations we find that it brings it home to them far more than learning regulations and laws in parrot fashion. As a matter of fact we are at present working on a murder case where a man met his death from a ruptured spleen. The trial is on this afternoon."

While undergoing the first part of his training, the European recruit is stationed at the Police Training School for seven months during which time he goes through the following curriculum:—Police regulations, ordinances and code (Criminal Law), traffic regulations and control, local knowledge (Hong Kong and Kowloon), composition and drafting reports, dictation, arithmetic, reading aloud, first aid, Cantonese, drill (squad drill, handling of arms, skirmishing and riot and disorder drill), revolver firing, musketry, taking finger prints, Lewis gunnery, Thompson gunnery and defile.

On passing out of the School, the recruit is posted to a Divisional Station for the second part of his training as a probationer learning street patrol and Charge Room duty.

At the end of three months the recruit is examined by a Board, consisting of a Superintendent, a Divisional Inspector and the Principal of the School, on the following subjects:—Writing a report; framing charges and summonses; practical street, station and police court work.

The training of Indian and Chinese recruits consists of six months at the School followed by one month at Central Police Station or Upper Levels Police Station.

Hakka recruits are enlisted in groups of not less than ten men, and formed into a special class remaining at the Training School for seven months. Qualification in the Punli dialect is essential before they commence the second part of their training schedule.

Inspector Shaftain pointed out to me that all Chinese recruits must know how to read and write their own language before they can join the Force. The Cantonese, he remarked, were a smart bunch of men.

TOUR OF PREMISES

We left the office and I was conducted on a tour of the premises by the Principal. In one of the class rooms I found eight European recruits studying Cantonese under a Chinese master. Seated at the head of the class was Sub-Inspector L. Tyler who was busily engaged in typing out statements in connection with the "murder" case which I have already explained earlier in this article. "I see you are mentioned in despatches," Sub-Inspector Tyler smilingly remarked to the Principal.

On the way to the Cantonese recruits' room we came across Indian recruits learning musketry in the grounds. We passed on. The visit to the Cantonese recruits was most interesting. All recruits in the room, the Principal told me, had just completed about three months book study. Without any preparation at all, Inspector Shaftain called on one of the class to answer a question regarding the control of traffic. Of another he asked what were the conditions of a European restaurant licence and of a third the hours for blasting and what precautions should be taken. All questions met with remarkable good answers considering the short period of study and the vast field the recruit has to cover.

A visit to the barrack rooms revealed spotless floors and exemplary tidiness.

We then returned to the office. Before I left, Inspector Shaftain had a few anecdotes up his sleeves to tell me. Here they are.

An Indian Lance-Sergeant during an examination for promotion was asked what steps he would take if a man he arrested put up violent resistance. The Indian replied that he would blow his whistle. When asked what he would do if no policeman came on the scene to his rescue, this was his reply, "I would write a 'chit' to the station!"

A young Chinese, sitting for an interpreters' examination, was asked to translate into English an incident where a pickpocket had been arrested and a razor blade found in his possession. The nearest translation to razor blade that the candidate gave was "whisker knife!"

A Chinese recruit was once asked what the night lights for the No. 10 signal were. His reply was, "red, black, red!" To which the Principal retorted, "What's the use of a black light at night?"

RURAL BUILDING LOT PURCHASED

At the offices of the Public Works Department yesterday afternoon, a plot of Crown Land at Island Road, registered at the Land Office as Rural Building Lot No. 395, was put up for public auction, the upset price being based at twenty cents per square foot.

Mr. Tang Kit Wai of No. 27, Hennessy Road, Wanchai was the

P. I. MINERS CLOSE HALF YEAR'S WORK WITH RECORD OUTPUT

Condition Good

Estimates For 1936 Is Found Too Conservative

ANTAMOK GOLD INCREASES YIELD TO P526,004

Once again all gold production records for the Philippines were broken, when the reports of June operations, received this week, showed that a total of P3,598,568 in bullion was shipped from the 15 operating plants. This is more than P200,000 better than the best previous record made in March of this year.

With one new plant, Big Wedge, going into production this month, one plant under construction at East Mindanao, three dredges operating on the rich deposits at Coco Grove, and several smaller operations not reported on, it is evident that estimates of P40,000,000 for the year's production will be too conservative.

The four plants under Benguet management, contributed, as usual, about two-thirds of the total, P2,007,944. Balatoc was well over a million pesos, Benguet Consolidated was well up, Cal Hor and Ipo Gold maintained their usual averages.

GAINS SHOWN

The Soriano interests jumped about P200,000, to account for P808,466. Antamok-Goldfields, with P526,004 coming from its mill, recorded the most sensational gain, while Masbate Consolidated, I.X.L. and I.X.L. Argos continued at their usual rate.

Marsman and Company shipped P527,877 from Itogon, Suyoc Consolidated, San Mauricio and United Paracale. Construction is going on at each of these plants, and bigger production figures are predicted for later months.

Demonstration's production was a little lower than in May, because of the installation of new machinery. The new washing plant is now in service, and July's output is expected to be higher.

NEW MACHINERY

Benguet Exploration dropped slightly, also because of the work going on within the plant. A new crushing unit will add to the efficiency of operations considerably.

Bagulo Gold's production was about the same as usual, as was Salacot's.

Most of the mining companies are mining lower grade ore than usual, because of the continued dry weather. In this way it will be possible to mine out areas which otherwise could be mined during the rainy season only with considerable trouble and expense.

Precautions have been taken by those companies which have plants subject to damage during typhoons, and every attempt made to secure them against interruption of operation no matter how severe possible storms may be.

CENTRAL BRITISH SCHOOL

NEW BUILDING OPENING IN SEPTEMBER

Farewell Assembly On Saturday

The second week-end of September will be the beginning of a new, and undoubtedly the most important, chapter in the history of the Central British School. September 14 will be a red letter day for it will mark the opening of the splendid new school building in Argyle Street opposite the Kowloon Hospital.

Thus when the pupils assemble in the present school hall in Nathan Road to break up for the annual summer vacation on Saturday morning, July 18, it will be for the last time. They will gather their books, and, after the assembly, is dismissed the pupils only bidder, and secured the lot at the upset price of $2,600.

The land, which is situated South East of Rural Building Lot No. 388, Island Road, has an area of about 13,000 square feet, and its annual Crown rental is $150. The lot is to be held from the Crown for a term of 75 years, with the option of renewal for one further term of 75 years.

Enquiries from the purchase elicited the news that the new owner intends to use the site for the erection of one house of European type. It is understood that the detailed plans for the lot have not yet been finally decided upon.

Mr. E. B. Reed, Superintendent of Crown Lands and Surveys, conducted the sale.

will say good-bye to the "dear old school." However, many happy and lasting memories will be associated with the building out of whose portals many students have passed and have distinguished themselves in different walks of life.

The old building has outlived its usefulness, at least as a school. It has served the children of Kowloon and Hong Kong for close on to 35 years. Its total inadequacy in recent years has been expressed time and again and it was only in March last year that the foundation stone of the new building was laid by the former Governor, Sir William Peel.

SCHOOL HISTORY

The foundation stone of the old Central British School building was laid on July 20, 1900, by the late Sir Henry Blake, a former Governor of the Colony. The building was erected by Mr. (now Sir) Robert Ho Tung and presented to the Colony on ground granted by the Government.

The building was opened on April 19, 1902, by His Excellency Major General Sir William Julius Gascoigne, K.C.M.G., Officer Administering the Government, in the presence of a large and representative gathering which included the late Rev. T. W. Pearce, who opened the proceedings with an address, Mrs. (now Lady) Ho Tung, the two Misses Ho Tung, Hon. W. Meigh Goodman, K.C., Chief Justice, Hon. A. G. Wise, Acting Attorney-General, Mr. (now Hon. Dr.) S. W. Tso, Mr. Ho Kom-tong, and Mr. B. James (Headmaster) and Mrs. James.

His Excellency opened the building with a silver key. It was then named the Kowloon School to provide education for children of European parentage.

A body of Indian policemen under Sgt. Garrod was present to receive His Excellency the O.A.G.

After cake and wine had been served in one of the large classrooms, which was decorated for the occasion, His Excellency proposed the toast to the prosperity of the school and the health of Mr. Ho Tung.

Replying to the toast, Mr. Ho Tung expressed the wish that the school would prosper and be a boon to the inhabitants of Kowloon.

When the school was first built it was erected on condition that it serve both British and Chinese children but a satisfactory compromise was reached between Government and Mr. Ho Tung whereby Government undertook to build a school in Yau-ma-tei for the sole benefit of the Chinese.

Many years ago the name of the school was changed to Central British School. Since the opening the attendance has grown by leaps and bounds and the total attendance at the present time is in the vicinity of 240.

MORE ACCOMMODATION

The demand for more accommodation could only be met by the erection of two wooden hutments on the upper playground some ten years ago. This naturally greatly curtailed the playground space for the children. Thus the school has daily laboured under cramped conditions for a number of years.

The new school, of which much has been written recently, will meet one of the greatest needs of education in the Colony. The children of to-day will be served with everything that is modern and up-to-date in the method of teaching and the apparatus supplied for the respective subjects.

The architect of the new school building is Mr. W. A. Cornish, F.R.I.B.A.

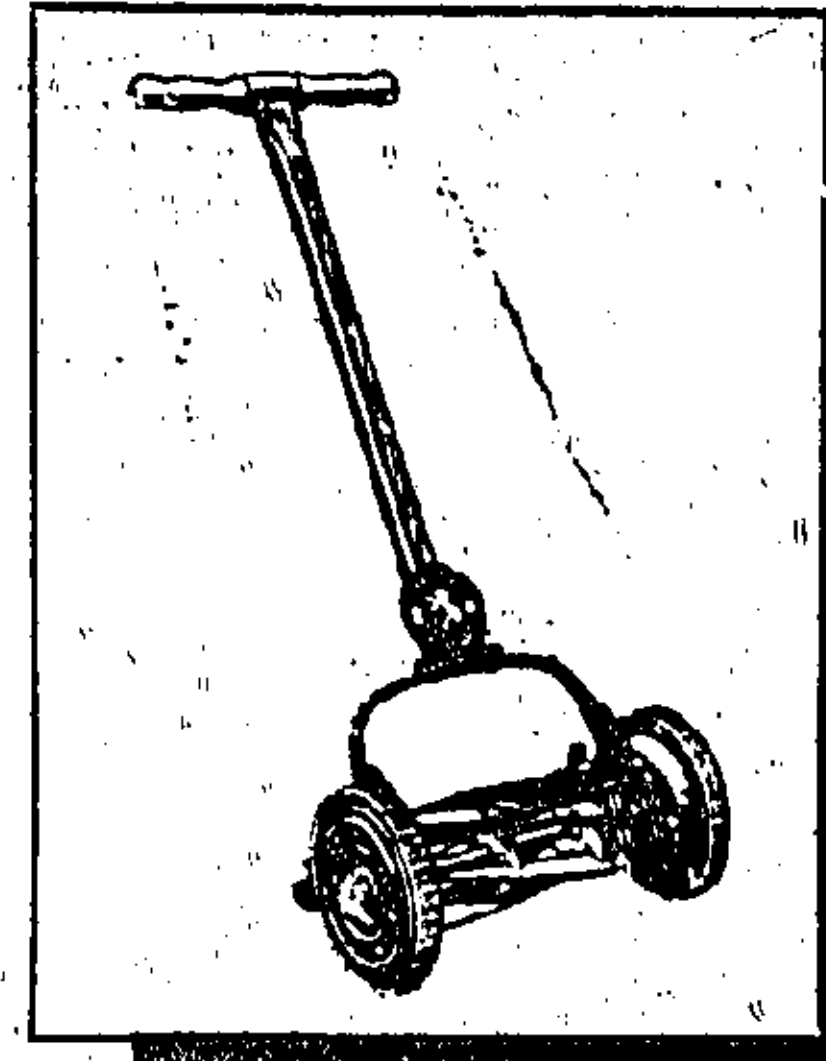

Mr. G. Franklin Nightingale held the reins of Headmastership of the C.B.S. for a lengthy period and on his retirement a few years ago was succeeded by the Rev. G. E. S. Updell, M.A., Hon. C.F., the present Headmaster.

The honours boards that have adorned the old school hall will find their places in the new and more spacious hall.

The Proven STOMACH REMEDY for Bad Cases

Amazing evidence of the remarkable speed with which indigestion and stomach pains can be stopped has been revealed by medical experiments and X-ray photographs of actual cases. These prove the ingredients of "Bisurated" Magnesia to be the quickest and most effective known to medical science. Within 5 minutes a teaspoonful of "Bisurated" Magnesia in a little water dissolves completely, filling in cases where numerous other remedies had failed entirely.

Its Action Explained—

Bisurated Magnesia is a powerful antacid in a little water. The moment this soothing draught reaches the tortured stomach it begins to prevent the acid fermenting undigested food. The contents of the stomach become an island and soothe the walls of the sensitive stomach lining. The pain quickly lessens and promptly disappears. By following up the treatment after each meal, your harassed stomach will soon know its tenderer and grow strong, until you can eat whatever you like and enjoy every meal without fear of wind and pain.

A NOTED ENGLISH DOCTOR SAYS:

"I find that 'Bisurated' Magnesia taken after my meals is the only thing that keeps me free from pain and discomfort, and I take it regularly. I often prescribe it for my patients, and have had very good results."

H. L. — M.A., M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P.

ANOTHER DOCTOR SAYS:

"'Bisurated' Magnesia gives excellent results and is the ideal remedy for stomach, pains and acidity. It is particularly recommended for Dyspepsia, Gastritis, Stomach Pains, Flatulence, and even Stomach Ulcers."

SHANGHAI WARNING TO REACTIONARIES

Unruly Persons Prohibited Appealing To Nanking

Shanghai, July 8. A warning has been issued by the Shanghai and Woosung Garrison Commander's Headquarters prohibiting unruly persons and reactionary elements making appeals to the Government relating to the political situation. The notification is believed to be issued against the "people's delegates" who were held up in Hong Kong. The notification, signed by Lieut.-Gen. Yang Hu, reads:—

"The districts under my jurisdiction and protection are located in a strategic area and include places for the transaction of business by foreigners and Chinese. In view of this, the maintenance of peace and order in the locality is a very important matter. At this time national crisis, many rumours are rife. Fearing that undesirable elements from outposts, falsely claiming to be representatives of the people, may come here under the pretence of submitting petitions to the Government, but in reality to spread dangerous propaganda and conspire with reactionary elements to create disturbances, I am co-operating with the Shanghai City Government and have instructed my various subordinates to make a vigorous search for such elements as a precautionary measure. This notification is issued for the information of the general public."—(N.C.D.N.)

KIDNAPPING IN CHINA

Commons Question

London, July 13. Replying to Mr. E. Day (Lab., Central Southwest) in the House of Commons to-day, Lord Cranborne, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, said that during 1935 till the present only one case of kidnapping of foreigners had occurred in China.

A Britisher was involved, Mr. Gareth Jones. The captors originally demanded £100,000 ransom. Negotiations for release were rendered impossible by the rapid movement of bandits who killed the captive.—Reuter.

The Daily Press

HONG KONG, JULY 14, 1936.

THE NEW FIRST LORD

Among the Government's well-wishers there will be nothing but satisfaction with the appointment of Sir Samuel Hoare to succeed Lord Monsell as First Lord of the Admiralty. No better choice could have been made for an office which, always of high importance, is in these times and circumstances of vital significance. The rehabilitation of our Naval defences, so dangerously weakened by demands for economy and the vain pursuit of disarmament schemes, has become one of the most urgent tasks of the day; and it is essential to have at the Admiralty a Minister able to command the confidence of the House of Commons, of the country and of the Senior Service, and strong enough to impress himself upon his Cabinet colleagues. Lord Monsell, who retires by his own choice, after doing valuable work, had the great advantage of having been a sailor before he became a politician, and of knowing, by years of service afloat, the Navy from the inside. That advantage Sir Samuel Hoare cannot, indeed, boast; but he has other conspicuous qualifications. As an administrator he has proved himself at the India Office; at the Foreign Office he has become intimately acquainted with the international problems and contingencies which must influence Naval policy, and both in counsel and debate he has shown his capacity to hold his own. Nor is it to be forgotten that he has another invaluable title to confidence—that of a Minister who is not afraid to resign.

His record at the Foreign Office gives the nation ample grounds for believing that he will enter on his new responsibilities with a mind free from illusion, with a clear realisation of what has to be done to make "the sea affair" secure, and with the will and the resource to get it done. What the present emergency altogether disallows, is a resort to half-measures and a relapse upon easy expedients. We cannot imagine that Sir Samuel Hoare would be party to either. His recall to office is, evidence that the Cabinet has need of him. His withdrawal from the Cabinet six months ago, far from weakening his influence in the House of Commons or in the country, has only added to his reputation. He starts, therefore, not only with a great opportunity, but with an equally great advantage; and we, as much as any, wish him the best of good luck in his high enterprise.

HU HAN MIN'S FUNERAL

Body Taken To Taumanlong

TRIBUTE PAID TO LATE STATESMAN

Canton, July 13. At eight o'clock this morning, the body of the late Mr. Hu Han-min was carried to its final resting place at Taumanlong, the eastern suburb of Canton. As heavily armed guards were strewn along the route leading from the Sun Yat Sen Memorial Hall to Taumanlong, senior civil officials, ranking military officers as well as students, merchants and labourers joined in the funeral procession, which blocked the streets for hours.

The coach carrying the remains of the late statesman was of special make, with black glass plates trimming all sides. Also a stupendous photographic study of the late leader, measuring ten feet high, was carried by eight bearers.

The procession reached Wang-fakong—the Seventy-two-Heroes Tomb—at noon and final respects were paid to the late statesman by those who, due to one reason or another, could not accompany the coffin further.

After over half an hour's interval for the performance of such rites, the procession continued and reached Taumanlong at about two o'clock. The body of the late leader was finally laid down at the spot where it was to be interred at some future date.

UPRIGHT LIFE. Mr. Hsiao Fu-cheng, the grand old statesman of the Southwest, wrote a brief essay of condolence with regard to the late Mr. Hu Han-min's state funeral. A gist of the essay reads:—

Mr. Hu Han-min led an upright life and, even in death, his spirit lives on. He was the most able and most trusted of Dr. Sun Yat Sen's followers. Through all adverse circumstances he clung to his purpose and neither material gains nor sheer might could swerve him and make him waver in his purpose.

Mr. Hu was brought up in Canton, he carried on his revolutionary work in Canton and he died in Canton—Canton, the city that gave birth to the Revolution; we must therefore engrave in our memories Mr. Hu Han-min's teachings and strive to carry them out.—Central Press.

DRAFT INCOME TAX LAW DISCUSSED

Proposal To Include $30 Income, $2,000 Capital

Nanking, July 7. The draft income tax law was the subject of a long discussion at a meeting of the Legislative Yuan this morning. The draft, it is understood, provides for a tax on salaries of $30 and up, and for a tax on business interests with a capital of $2,000 and up.

Some members expressed the opinion that the tax should be collected on higher incomes and bigger capital. The matter will be referred to a committee for further examination, and will be submitted for discussion at a general session on July 9.

Mr. Chen Chang-heng, one of the examiners of the income tax law, told the Yuan that, while the Ministry of Finance originally estimated the enforcement of the tax would net approximately $5,000,000 annually now that interest accrued on bonds, debentures, stocks, and bank deposits have been included among the taxable items. The tax on agricultural industry and real estate had been struck out, primarily because Chinese peasants already are overburdened and real estate is already being, or soon will be, taxed by other levies.

Mr. Chen Chan-pu declared that not only was the basis by which business profits were taxed unjust, but also the tax rate on the income of public functionaries and those engaged in free occupations was unreasonably high.

Mr. Liu Cheng-jung stated that because of the imperfection of the accounting system in China, it would be most difficult to collect income tax on the net profit of a business.

NORTH CHINA SMUGGLING

Commons Desire Information

London, July 13. In the House of Commons to-day, replying to Mr. A. C. Moreing (Con., Preston), Lord Cranborne said that he understood the Japanese official sent to inquire into the smuggling in North China has returned but no information has been received as a result of his visit.

Mr. Moreing asked whether the Foreign Office will expedite the matter in order to obtain information before the House rises.

Lord Cranborne replied that the Ambassador in Tokyo is well aware of the anxiety felt by the Commons and will send a report as soon as it can be done.

Mr. Moreing further asked whether the Government had yet arrived at a conclusion as to what steps could be usefully taken to facilitate an early settlement.

Lord Cranborne replied that the Ambassador had, again, discussed the matter with the Japanese Government who, he understood, were hopeful of a solution being reached as the result of conversations recently initiated in Nanking. The Government would take any steps which could be usefully taken.—Reuter.

KAYAU MURDER MYSTERY

Search For Slayer Continues

LOVE TRIANGLE SUGGESTED

Shanghai, July 13. An increased number of armed patrols, sent out by the special Japanese naval landing party to tour the districts of the Settlement, thickly populated by the Japanese, was put into effect yesterday following the Kayau murder.

It is also announced that the landing party plans to establish new branch patrol offices in the eastern and western cotton-mill districts of the Settlement and also the Hongkew district.

The Chinese Settlement authorities, the Japanese military forces and diplomatic officials are sparing no effort to solve the murder. A love triangle is the latest theory delved into by the police as the search for the motive of the slaying continues.

It is suggested that Kayau was interested in a Korean dancing girl whose sweetheart plotted the attack owing to jealousy.

The Japanese marines guarding the scene of the murder have been withdrawn.—Reuter.

THREATENING NOTE TO A DOCTOR

Self-Styled Murder Gang Demands $6,000

MAN CAUGHT IN ACT OF TELEPHONING

Shanghai, July 8. To indicate the audacity with which they were going to commit the crime, an alleged gang of blackmailers used some unusual names in a letter which they recently sent to Dr. Ma Fong-pah, one of the best known Chinese medical practitioners with his residence at 802 Haining Road, it was unfolded in the First Special District Court yesterday at the trial of five men accused of attempted extortion.

The letter, which demanded a "loan" of $6,000 from the doctor, was signed by six persons describing themselves as members of an assassination gang and calling themselves as "Iron Head Keng Pao," "Robber No. 2," "Axe Corps Ah Mao," "Long Legs Siau Dee," "Never to Die Lau Woo," and "Victrol Chung San." Mr. T. Y. Chang, Assistant Municipal Advocate, prosecuting the five men, told the Court.

GRAVE DECISION AT CONFERENCE

Southwest Committees To Be Abolished

LEADERS EXCHANGE OPINIONS

THREE CONCLUSIONS REACHED

Nanking, July 13. It is understood that the Central Executive Committee to-day will discuss the views submitted by a number of Government and other leaders who have been holding informal exchange of opinion during the week-end regarding a solution of the crisis between Nanking and the Southwest. They include Sun Fo, Feng Yu-hsiang, Wang Chung-hui, Hsu Chung-chi, Tang Shao-yi and Li Lieh-chun.

It is generally believed that the C.E.C. will be asked to endorse the following three conclusions: firstly, that an effort must be made to bring about a common national policy regarding foreign affairs; secondly, there must be a unified government for the whole country; thirdly, there must be a unified command of the nation's armed forces.

If these conclusions are adopted, the Southwest authorities will be asked to subscribe thereto; failing which the Central Government may be empowered to take whatever steps may be deemed necessary.

In the meanwhile frequent telegrams are being received from Generals Chen Chi-tang and Li Chung-jen, but it is understood they hold out little prospect of a compromise owing to insistence on the original proposals.—Reuter.

HO CHIEN'S CALL

Nanking, July 13. General Ho Chien called on General Chiang Kai-shek this morning.—Reuter.

C.P.C. MEETING

Nanking, July 13. The plenary session of the C.E.C. is expected to end to-morrow. It will be followed by a meeting of the Central Political Council on July 15 for the purpose of appointing Yuan Presidents and Ministers. It is understood that the present office-holders will be reappointed.—Reuter.

SOUTHWEST DEMANDS

Nanking, July 13. If the dozen or so proposals submitted pass the second General Meeting to-day, the plenary conference of the Central Executive Council is expected to adjourn Tuesday, following the third General Meeting.

The two most important tasks ahead of the Council are to decide upon the fate of the Southwest Executive Committee and the Southwest Political Council, and the election of a successor to the late Mr. Hu Han-min, famous southern leader.

The South-west's five demands, including that for war against Japan, have been referred to the Committees on Military and Political Affairs. According to earlier reports, it is generally considered that the South-west's demand for

SOUTHWEST ORGANS TO BE ABOLISHED

Nanking, July 13.

The plenary conference adopted a resolution to abolish the Southwest Political Council and Southwest Executive Committee and appointed General Yu Han-mow to succeed General Chen Chi-tang as Commander-in-Chief of the First Army Corps and Director of Peace Preservation for Kwangtung. It appointed Generals Li Chung-jen and Pei Chung-hsi as Director and Deputy Director of Peace Preservation for Kwangsi and re-appointed Mr. Lin Yun-kai and General Huang Hsu-chu respectively as Governors of Kwangtung and Kwangsi.

The resolution also authorised the organisation of national defence at a conference consisting of eighteen members including Generals Chen Chi-tang, Li Chung-jen, Pei Chung-hsi, Sung Chieh-yuan, Han Fu-chu and Yu Han-mow.—Reuter.

war will be refused. It is believed the plenary session may consider the South-west's points to-day, but the decision will not be known until Tuesday, in all probability.

The various sub-committees were in session this morning, examining the proposals before the session. These are conspicuously scarce, but what there are are described as substantial, important and practical.

The sub-committee on Educational Affairs has completed its work and that on Political Affairs, one of the most important, continues to-day and probably to-morrow.—Reuter.

BUILDING TO BE KEPT SECRET

Information Refused

Japan's refusal to accept the new Naval Treaty will cause no surprise and had, in fact, been anticipated. She withdrew from the Naval Conference last January when her demand for a "common upper limit" of tonnage was rejected and, therefore, had no part in drafting the Treaty itself.

Since then, however, it has been semi-officially intimated that Japan while formally holding aloof from the new agreement, will probably abide by the rules for qualitative limitation. That is to say, she will not exceed the limits of tonnage and gun calibre specified in the Treaty since it would not be to her interest to start a building race by laying down monster ships.

On the other hand, her present decision, apparently, indicates that she does not propose to furnish advance information about her building programme.

If this be so, it means that, whereas Britain, the United States and France—and ultimately, it is hoped, Italy, Germany and Russia—will all be pledged to give full information about their new naval armaments, Japan's naval preparations will continue to be made in secret.

NEWS SUMMARY

The prevalence of foreign seamen coming ashore from their ships and remaining in the Colony without passports was mentioned by Sub-Inspector Nolloth at the Central Magistracy yesterday when he prosecuted Nikiwatori Kanji, 32, a Japanese, of Gloucester Road, for having entered the Colony without a valid passport and with having failed to register. ## JAPANESE TO PRESS SASAKI CASE

REGARDLESS OF WHOM THEY HAVE TO DEAL WITH

A Bearing On Dealings With Chinese

Shanghai, July 8. Diplomatic negotiations between the Japanese and British authorities in Peking regarding the alleged assaults by British soldiers on Japanese subjects will be continued, Mr. Yoshio Muto, First Secretary of the Japanese Embassy told local press representatives yesterday. "We intend to press for the redress of wrongs committed against our nationals, regardless of whom we have to deal with," Mr. Muto said. "Our attitude in this case will have a serious bearing on our future dealings with the Chinese authorities."

"I can understand how our residents in Peking are incensed at the verdicts returned by the British Court. It is to be regretted that our respect and trust in British judicial procedure has thus been betrayed. I believe that a more complete investigation could have been carried out on the basis of the circumstantial evidence available. Technically, it is possible there is no ground for objection to the procedure adopted by the Court, but actually no one is going to be satisfied with its findings. I was warned by foreign residents in Peking that the British would attempt to bury the case under a mass of technicalities. This has happened, and I sincerely regret it for the sake of British justice. There is no room for doubting that British soldiers were the culprits in these cases."—(N. C. D. News)

OPINION DIVIDED IN BRITAIN

Austro-German Agreement

PRESS SUSPICIOUS OF NAZI SINCERITY

Views On Italian Share In Development

London, July 13. Judging by press comment, opinion in Britain upon the Austro-German agreement is somewhat divided. It is noted that in Berlin, Vienna and Rome the agreement is acclaimed as a victory respectively for Herr Hitler, Dr. Schuschnigg and Signor Mussolini.

There is general agreement among British newspapers that if this fresh development is taken at its face value, the elimination, if only temporarily, of the danger spot in Europe is a matter for satisfaction.

But some newspapers are inclined to doubt whether in spite of the clause forbidding Nazi propaganda in Austria those Nazis who are once again given freedom of Austria will be content to be seen and not heard. These suspicions are taken by such newspapers as explaining the apparent abandonment of Anschluss, one of the leading items in the Nazi creed.

FRANCE ALARMED

The newspapers recognise the Italian share in and approval of this development and are inclined in effect to regard the move from Signor Mussolini's point of view as a short term policy designed in large measure to impress Europe with the fact that he has an alternative policy at his disposal.

Whether it is more than that the newspapers think time and additional details alone can show. —British Wireless.

FRENCH PRESS VIEWS

Paris, July 13. The Austro-German agreement continues to be prominently featured by the whole press. The most important result of the understanding, according to the well-known political writer Saint Brice in "Le Journal," will be the necessity of regrouping the Western Powers. The Stresa front, comprising Italy, Britain and France, as opposed to Germany, now appears to be null and void.

Pertinax in the "Echo de Paris" says that Austria's "real independence" could only have been assured by the combined efforts of France, Italy and the Little Entente, but it is now evident that such a combination is impossible. —Transocean News Service.

PERILOUS SITUATION

Paris, July 13. The press is almost unanimous in declaring that a new perilous situation has been created in Europe by the Austro-German agreement. Such secrecy where-with the agreement was negotiated is interpreted as a clear indication that Chancellor Hitler's desire, to prevent Signor Mussolini rejoining the Stresa and Locarno fronts is so strong that he is willing to change completely his previous policy.

A triple alliance under which Austrian independence will finally be absorbed by the Reich is generally foreshadowed. It is also pointed out that although at present nothing is known what engagements Italy has taken to compensate for German sacrifices, it is believed that in future Signor Mussolini does not contemplate international co-operation which Herr Hitler does not approve. —Reuter's Bulletin Service.

CAUTIOUS VIEW IN LONDON London, July 13. A cautious view of the Austro-German rapprochement is taken in diplomatic circles in London, where the opinion is held that while it removes, at least temporarily, one danger spot it would be unwise to be too optimistic.

It is felt the agreement does not necessarily imply that German pressure on Austria will cease entirely. It is thought Herr Adolf Hitler may change his method, and exercise pressure from internal rather than external sources. Despite the Austrian declaration that Nazi propaganda will not be permitted, it is felt that as freedom will be given to many Nazi propagandists they are not likely to remain silent.

It is considered obvious that the rapprochement was known and agreed to in advance by Signor Benito Mussolini, the Italian Dictator, and it is a matter for speculation whether it is due to the Four Power Pact of 1933, which will recognise the increased influence of Soviet Russia in European affairs.

Press opinion is divided. The "Morning Post" says there is obviously more than meets the eye in the agreement and it would not be surprising if there should be a tendency to look this gift horse very thoroughly in the mouth. The "Daily Mail" maintains that the sanctionist front had the inevitable result of throwing Italy into the arms of Germany. "There must be no more suicidal meddling with affairs remote from our interests," it says. The paper urges a closer Anglo-German understanding.

The "Daily Express" welcomes the agreement as a movement in the direction of the pacification of Europe, relieving Britain of many of her obligations there.

JUDGMENT RESERVED The "Daily Herald" says on the surface it is a good thing, but adds that judgment must be reserved until the world can see more clearly what is below the surface.

A similar view is held by the "News Chronicle," which feels Europe may accept this gift horse but, agreeing with the "Post," must look it squarely in the mouth. One of these days it may bite, it warns.

"We must wait," advises the "Daily Telegraph," "to be sure that what is hailed as the extinction of a volcano does not mean the opening of a new crater elsewhere." —Reuter.

STATEMENT IN LONDON

Austrian Government Intentions

London, July 13. The Austrian Minister in London, Baron Frankenstein, has issued a statement regarding the Austro-German agreement in the course of which he says:

"The Austrian Government is determined not to relax its vigilance to prevent the undermining of the State by any political party and will therefore, if necessary, continue to take strong measures against National Socialist propaganda."

"Within the next few weeks the law for the protection of the state is to be introduced, forbidding every attempt to endanger the continued existence of independent Austria, illegal propaganda in favour of Anschluss and so on."

"The Austrian Government, moreover, do not intend to allow the internal development of Austria to be modified by National Socialist ideology, for instance in regard to the racial question, etc."

HAPSBURG COUP REMOVED

Belgrade Views On Agreement

FOREIGN REACTIONS

Belgrade, July 13. The acute danger of a legitimist movement in favour of the restoration of the Hapsburgs has been removed by the Austro-German agreement although the latter does not expressly refer to the matter, is the opinion voiced by the Vienna correspondent of the paper "Politika."

The press here generally attributes great importance to the agreement as re-establishing normal relations between Germany and Austria. —Transocean News Service.

CZECH DOUBTS Prague, July 13. Scepticism is the predominant note in the press comments here on the Austro-German agreement, by the "Lidove Noviny" which often serves as the mouthpiece of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. After saying that a careful analysis of the agreement will be necessary, the paper adds that if the agreement should really contribute to the appeasement of Europe, all friends of peace will welcome it.

"Narodni Osvozození" opines that the agreement has not caused disquiet in Czechoslovakia, but the future developments alone could show whether it really is an instrument of peace. —Transocean News Service.

RUMANIAN DISTURBED Bucharest, July 13. The Austro-German agreement has disturbed Rumanian political circles.

It is feared this is only the beginning of a greater bloc of nations which will be opposed to the Little and Balkan Ententes. Pessimists see a wall across Europe, cutting off the Little Entente from its ally, France.

Some circles are suggesting the possibility of a Russo-Rumanian military alliance. —Reuter.

ROME PRESS PRAISE

Rome, July 12. After the first instant of hesitation was passed, all leading Rome papers announce the Austro-German Agreement in terms reserved only for events of the very highest importance.

"Messaggero" heads its leader "Service to the Cause of Peace." "Voce d'Italia" speaks of "European Clarification," "Popolo di Roma" of "a remarkable step forward in European rehabilitation," and all Rome papers give prominence to the telegrams exchanged between Signor Mussolini and Dr. Schuschnigg, which the "Voce d'Italia" calls an "event that the Government and people of Italy can only welcome with pleasure." —Transocean News Service.

TRIUMPH FOR MUSSOLINI

Rome, July 12. The Austro-German agreement is considered a triumph for Mussolini's diplomacy, and the question is asked in some quarters whether it is the forerunner of an Italo-German agreement.

It is taken for granted that no more will be heard of the Stresa Front, and the expression is heard that the pre-war Triple Alliance will be revived, with Italy no longer in the position of the junior partner. —Reuter.

ANTHONY EDEN CRITICISED

Mediterranean Pact Omission

VIEWS ON NEW DEVELOPMENT

London, July 13. The Austro-German agreement is welcomed by the London "Times" which describes it as strengthening the road to European peace and stabilisation.

The paper expresses the hope that in view of this agreement Germany will participate in the forthcoming Brussels conference of the Locarno powers in accordance with the desire already expressed by Italy. The "Daily Telegraph" takes the view that it is advisable to wait "to see if new craters will not be opened" in the European volcano after the Austrian crater has been closed. The paper goes on to criticise Mr. Anthony Eden for not having abrogated the various Mediterranean pacts simultaneously with the raising of the sanctions. By this omission, says the paper, Britain compelled Mussolini to leave the door open for an Italo-German agreement or understanding.

The "Daily Herald," whilst reserving definite judgment, thinks the agreement puts an end to the dangerous tension, a result for which all had to be thankful. The "Daily Express" warmly welcomes the agreement as an important step towards pacification of Europe and as releasing Britain from numerous international commitments.

Lord Rothermere takes "advantage of the conclusion of the agreement to advocate once more in the 'Daily Mail' a close understanding between Germany and Britain." —Transocean News Service.

GERMANY AND AUSTRIA

Chancellors Exchange Greetings

Berlin, July 12. The Fuehrer received the following telegram from the Federal Chancellor, Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg:

"The conclusion of the Agreement whose aim it is to restore the friendly and neighbourly relations between the two German States offers me the welcome opportunity to greet Your Excellency as Fuehrer and Chancellor of the German Reich and at the same time give expression to the conviction that the operation of this agreement will promote the well-being of Austria and the German Reich and consequently be a blessing to the whole German People. I believe that Your Excellency will share my opinion that this agreement is also a valuable contribution towards general peace."

The Fuehrer and Reich Chancellor thereupon replied: "The greetings which Your Excellency extends to me on the occasion of to-day's conclusion of the Austro-German Treaty are heartily reciprocated. I add the wish that by this agreement the old traditional relations rooted in racial unity and century-old similarity of history will be restored in order that the two German States might work together in future, hand in hand, for their common welfare and for the strengthening of peace in Europe." —Transocean News Service.

MR. EDEN'S REST

London, July 13. The Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden is returning to London on Tuesday after a week's rest in the country.

Yesterday, Lord Halifax, who has been deputising for Mr. Eden, and was staying nearby, drove over to have a talk with him. —British Wireless.

RAILWAYS IN BRITAIN

Safety Record Maintained

London, July 13. The excellent record for safety of British Railways unequalled elsewhere in the world was maintained last year as is shown by the annual report of the Chief Inspecting Officer issued to-day.

Accidents were almost of the same low level as in previous years. The only serious increase is in the list of what are described as movement accidents or those due to presence of trains which, however, were not the cause of injuries. The majority of these accidents are attributed to lack of caution by the travelling public.

In train accidents the numbers of passengers killed and injured last year were 13 and 408 respectively. Thirteen deaths occurred in one accident, namely a collision at Welwyn Garden City, and the number compares with the annual average of seven for the previous five years.

Cases of injury show an appreciable decrease compared with the average for the past five years. —British Wireless.

ANGLO-ITALIAN DEBTS

Clearing Arrangements

London, July 13. The Treasury have made an order, under the Debts Clearing Offices Act 1934 setting up an Anglo-Italian clearing office. The order comes into operation next Wednesday contemporaneously with the Order in Council revoking the orders of last year under which sanctions were imposed. The procedure of payment including making of declarations at customs will be generally similar to that followed under the Anglo-Spanish clearing.

Negotiations are proceeding with the Italian Government regarding the distribution of sterling sums received by the Clearing Office under the order. Pending conclusion of these negotiations these sums will be retained in a reserve fund at the Bank of England. —British Wireless.

STRAW VOTE IN AMERICA

Majority For Landon

New York, July 12. Mr. Alfred M. Landon, the Republican candidate for the presidency of the United States, would be elected by a majority of thirteen electoral college votes over the Democrat, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, if the election was held to-day, according to the result of a nation-wide straw vote conducted by the Institute of Public Opinion and published by the New York "Herald-Tribune" to-day.

The poll was conducted between June 18 and July 6 and shows that Mr. Landon, Governor of Kansas, would have 272 electoral college votes and Mr. Roosevelt 259.

Mr. Landon would have an actual minority popular vote, however. He would carry only twenty-one of the forty-eight states, but those credited to him include New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois, the three states with the largest electoral college representation. —Reuter.

TOKYO REBELS EXECUTED

Woman's Car Crashes Into Crowd

San Paolo, July 12. Five were killed and five seriously injured, while thirty-two suffered minor hurts, in the course of the Round-the-Houses race here to-day.

The French woman driver, Mlle. Helle Née, was travelling at 160 miles an hour when a spectator tried to cross the road in front of her car.

Miss Née braked her machine hard, and it mounted to the pavement and somersaulted three times, crashing into the crowd along the route.

Mlle. Née was thrown twenty yards clear of the car into the grandstand and seriously injured. —Reuter.

GRAVE SITUATION IN PALESTINE

Amir Abdullah's Disclosures

ULTIMATUM TO HIGH COMMISSIONER

Pressure From Various Directions

Jerusalem, July 13. Rumours that the Mandatory Government is prepared to prohibit Jewish immigration remain unconfirmed, but the situation continues to be strained and the arrival of further reinforcements for the British Army is announced.

According to despatches here from Transjordan, Amir Abdullah expressed himself pessimistically to British pressmen concerning the position in that country.

The Amir stated he had been requested from various sides to send a 24-hour ultimatum to the British High Commissioner of Palestine requesting him to grant the Arab demands.

These requests had been declined by the Amir since the time limit was too narrow, but he indicated his willingness to approach the British High Commissioner on the subject provided the Amir be given at least ten days' time for fulfilment of such a mission.

The Amir manifested considerable anxiety as to the possible results of an eventual negative reply from the High Commissioner since the entire Arab population of Transjordan were enthusiastically supporting the Arab cause in Palestine. —Transocean News Service.

It is understood the Rifle Brigade has been ordered to prepare to sail at short notice. —Reuter.

GERMANY TAXED ENOUGH

Finance Methods Explained

Berlin, July 12. Answering questions addressed to him by the German News Agency, Dr. Schacht made the following statement about the finance methods now in vogue in dealing with Germany's greatest national problems:

"It is not necessary to devote any lengthy discussion to prove that the total amount required by the German Government for carrying out its anti-unemployment campaign and assuring the defence of the nation is greater than the amounts received from taxation. We cannot tax the German people so heavily that the whole amount required for the creation of work could thereby be financed. It would also be unjust, were the present generation to bear alone the whole cost of the armament which will protect the future generations also. Instead of overburdening the people with taxation the Reich Government offers the people a loan which permits the retention of its savings and the enjoyment of the interest thereon. It goes without saying that the loans issued each year will not exceed the savings from year to year. I might say that our finance methods are just as unconventional as the Versailles Treaty was so the Treaty of Peace. One cannot reproach a War invalid for not walking along according to established custom." —Transocean News Service.

Bonneville (Utah), July 13. Captain George Eyston, with his co-driver Albert Denley, started at 5.30 p.m. B.S.T. yesterday in an attempt on the records from 500 kilometres to 48 hours although the records will not be officially announced until the completion of the run.

It is known that he had already broken the following records: Five hundred kilometres, old record, Jenkins, 151.32 and new 153.302.

Five hundred miles, Cobb, 147.64; Eyston, 152.343.

One thousand kilometres, Cobb, 144.93; Eyston, 152.136.

Two thousand kilometres, Eyston (former record), 144.21; Eyston, 151.944.

Two thousand miles, Eyston (former record), 142.705; Eyston, 149.00.

Approximately three thousand kilometres, Eyston (former record), 144.089; Eyston, 149.00.

He has also broken the record for approximately three hours, six hours and twelve hours, in the last named covering approximately 148.00.

The track is wearing fast and the heat is terrific. —Reuter.

SIX NEW RECORDS

London, July 13. It is announced officially that Captain Eyston broke six world records in the first 1,500 miles of his assault on Utah on the world's 24-hour speed record. Four other records have been unofficially broken.

Eyston is driving his 450 horsepower British racing car, "Speed of the Wind" and is accompanied by his assistant, Denley, with whom he is taking two-hour turns at the wheel. They travelled at an average of 155 miles per hour over the first ten laps. —British Wireless.

PERRY BEATS VAN RYN IN THREE SETS

AUSTRALIA'S 'BIG THREE' ADVANCE: BOROTRA WINS IN DOUBLES

(By A. WALLIS MYERS)

London, June 26.

England's quota of survivors tops the list in Wimbledon's last 16.

After the third round in the singles was completed yesterday there were five home players still surviving. America and Australia each had three and the remaining five, each an orphan in the field, were distributed among New Zealand, Germany, Czechoslovakia, France and Spain.

This fourth-day roll-call still keeps the secret of the ultimate winner. It does not alter the original equation nor disturb the thought that the title can only go to one of four countries.

This week's matches are but a qualifying competition for the "tournament of eight" which is due on Monday.

Yesterday, superior class always commanding the stage, none of the big men was ever threatened, and only one of them dropped a set.

The galleries were thicker than ever, but there was no attempted feat of giant-killing, and indeed no "needle" match to prevent a va-et-vient in search of a real thrill.

Yet it is only a case of excitement deferred. The cornfield is steadily burning, and soon the quarry will be exposed. Perry, Budge, Crawford, Allison and Quist may lack a challenging opponent in the fourth round, but the peripatetic Grant has now to chase the two-handed thunderbolts of McGrath, and Von Cramm has to play a Spanish protagonist who beat him in the Davis Cup this year.

BATTLES IN PROSPECT

After that, of course, the real fight begins. Perry may renew his Australian battles with McGrath. Quist oppose Budge on a faster court than Philadelphia, and with more depending on the result; Austin replay his Wimbledon encounter of last year with Allison, and Crawford, in what should be a classic duel, face Von Cramm for the first time on turf. These battles are coming nearer.

This peep ahead disposes rather cavalierly, I admit, of the less lights, as yet unextinguished.

Do they quite deserve an oblivion in advance? "Cam" Malfray, for example, was in capital form yesterday against young Jamain, of France, constantly cheating him of a Lacoste-like drive by a stop-volley that did not telegraph its arrival.

MARTIN-LEGEAY'S SECRET

Then D. W. Butler, showing the value of stern training, outlasted and at times outplayed the tall and long-reaching Petra. In the third set Butler signalled his encircling grip by losing on ten points—he could afford to pause for fresh supplies in the fourth.

More than a passing wave of congratulation is due to Andre Martin-Legeay. Where Oliff and Andrews failed he succeeded; he beat the smooth-stroking Paul Feret in the three sets.

I made a special journey to the court to learn his secret. Briefly it was this: Martin-Legeay, by the shrewdest employment of the court's angles, laboured for the lofted ball, and when he got it, always moving forward, he made certain of the kill.

His victory, a triumph for the tactical art, indicates his position as the No. 1 right-handed player in France.

ADVANCE OF CASKA

Caska, of Prague, is another invader who has found exaltation on a grass surface. He is one of those mid-European players who have advanced behind the hedge of modesty and quiet scientific study of the game.

He paused in his task of beating Guy Cooper to concede the third set, but his passage was never seriously checked.

Vivian McGrath, among the players of world class, had the stiffest fight. He lost a set, and nearly another, to Del Castillo.

Detecting that the young Australian's withering backhand—the two-handed axe stroke—found its best incitement in the top-spin drive, the South American changed to under-spin.

The slower, curling ball often caused McGrath to mistime his return, and if the Sydney youth in the tortuous fourth set, which ran to 22 games, had not raced forward on his deepest drives to use the volleyer's art, the cheery Del Castillo would have been fighting and possibly winning a fifth set.

PERRY'S TWO LOVE SETS

Now for the giants who came through so serenely, some of them maybe wishing that the attack had been more searching.

Perry, after losing three out of the first four games to Van Ryn, was off like an unbridled horse. Virtually he won two love sets, for his break which gave him the opening set was as brilliant and as rapidly compiled as the break that ended the match. It is only fair to the American to say that he had suffered from a bout of fever over the week-end, and was ill-prepared for a battle-royal against the champion. After a brave beginning he was a spent force.

But Perry, in the third set, was playing with petrifying speed and, except now and then over head, he was in perfect touch with a fast court and a flying ball.

BUDGE UNTHREATENED

No description of the Budge-Lesueur match is necessary. The Frenchman could offer no resistance worthy of the name, and in his backhand corner was a gaping hole.

Crawford and Gandar Dower thoroughly enjoyed their first encounter, though the Englishman had little to offer in exchange for Crawford's beautifully balanced game, under fine control, except an athlete's ardour and a chess brain.

Even Gandar Dower's sly drop-shots could not be created when Crawford had his man racing to a corner that rarely permitted the racket to come into contact with the ball.

But there was a delightful air of mutual happiness about this duel. The good shouts were saluted with a natural grace, and Gandar Dower's expiring effort—two love games by lobs and drops—brought a radiant smile to his opponent.

Allison had a match as long as Austin's was brief, though the American champion did not forget a set.

I fancy he was disposed to rest a disloyal leg, and only to use it when the Belgian threat became serious. There was always a service ace, shot from an anchored base, to readjust a falling scale; but Van Den Bynde, with his pleasing style, was always in the hunt.

Austin's mistakes against Tuckey were so few, his flow of drives so unrelenting, that the soldierly little chance. A backhand less bendable under pressure might have won a few more games. Austin was too much the perfect controller yesterday to be resisted.

VON CRAMM BEATS BOUSSUS

Once more Von Cramm did not get the challenge for which his zeal and training yearn. He found Christian Boussus a clever and deceptive opponent, but not one whose stamina permitted him to sustain a continuous attack.

The German could always begin his forcing shots off a rather weak service and though Von Cramm's ground strokes were not always reliable he had a bewitching backhand drive on the run to cheat the volleyer.

Now that Grant has overcome his "centre-courtitis" his confidence is mounting. On Monday he lost two sets, on Wednesday one; yesterday, against Avory he had a clean sheet.

Both men were prepared for gallant peregrinations and the rallies were often long, but Avory could not supply the service or frontal attack that could embarrass the little American. The gateway to every set was barred.

C.M. JONES' TRIUMPH

C.M. Jones, like Butler, found a French victim, and his defeat of Pelizza in three sets was a fine bit of work.

Equally laudable, if less surprising, was Lee's victory over Sted-

CHEQUE ALLEGED TO HAVE BEEN DISHONOURED

Shanghai, July 8.

Judgment for plaintiffs was given by Judge P. Grant Jones in H.M. Supreme Court yesterday in a case brought by Chu Tse-heng against S. C. Singham on a claim for $4,547.17, through a cheque which was alleged to have been dishonoured. In the previous hearing of the case on May 27 this year, defendant denied that the cheque had been dishonoured, and said that he stopped payment on it because the defendant owed him some money. The judge then decided that there was a conflict between the parties which needed to be investigated, and the case was adjourned for a special hearing.

Mr. C. E. Lowe appeared for the plaintiff during yesterday's proceedings.

In evidence, defendant said, that he had been the sole proprietor of a company by the name of Singham Brothers & Co., and had employed the plaintiff as a compradore from November 20, 1935. According to the agreement between the parties, the plaintiff advanced to him the sum of $4,547.17, which sum he admitted having received. The money was advanced to him at different periods after the agreement was drawn up.

The judge observed that there was "something nasty" about the case, although the issue was a simple one. Mr. Lowe said that the compradore had been employed by the defendant, and the defendant had asked from him more money than he was entitled to receive. The judge later stated that the delivery orders issued for the transfer of goods from the defendant's office and godown were the decisive factor of the case. On examining the delivery orders, it was found that they were made out between the clients of the firm and the defendant, who was the proprietor of the company. Privately of contract was thus established between the defendant, and the firm's debtors, and the compradore was not able to sue for money due. Defendant pointed out, however, that the compradore had made himself responsible for all the goods.

His Lordship made an order for the debts owing by customers to the defendant to be made over to the plaintiff, and gave judgment in the sum of $2,408.22, this representing the amount claimed by the plaintiff after the deduction of the money received by him in return for goods sold.—(N.C.D.N.).

man, a difficult nut to crack on any court. The beautiful turf on No. 2 court delighted the forehand only a defensive stroke. Serving finely throughout, Lee won in three sets, and can now face Crawford with the knowledge that he has nearly regained the form that astonished the Australian in the Davis Cup match at Wimbledon three years ago.

THREE HOURS OF BOROTRA

Borotra fans could not complain that their idol was not on view. He spent three hours on court using a relay of berets to win two protracted doubles matches.

In the first he was engaged with Brugnon, nursing a blistered hand, against Fisher and Kruljevic, Switzerland and Yugoslavia in alliance. It required 28 games to decide whether there should be a fourth set. It also required an acrobatic feat by Borotra to prevent it, for Brugnon could not lend his customary support, although he saved one set point.

Passing without a rest to a mixed doubles match with Miss Noel, against De Borman and Mlle. Adamson, Borotra began to show signs of wear and tear. Moreover, the partnership was new and anyone who plays with Borotra for the first time has to learn the art of disappearing from view at moments which the Basque may dictate.

Miss Noel came to the rescue of the battered forces in the second set and Borotra whipped up enough energy to save the critical third, in which De Borman distinguished himself by some fine interventions. Had his partner's backhand been stronger, there might have been a different ending.

Frank Wild and Miss Whitmarsh showed their sympathetic combination when they beat I. G. Colling and Mlle. de Meurmeester. Wild's service was always penetrating, and again.

H.A.C. WIN THE "DAILY TELEGRAPH" CUP

First Competition Under New Rules

LONDON DIVISION'S TRAINING TEST

(Special Air Mail Service)

Stirbright Ranges, June 22. The Daily Telegraph Cup has been won, after two days' strenuous shooting, by The Honourable Artillery Company, who have held it nine times before under the old conditions. The H.A.C.'s last victory was in 1931.

The runners-up and winners of the Camrose Cup, also presented by the proprietors of The Daily Telegraph, are The London Rifle Brigade.

Next, in order of merit, were The Artists' Rifles, Queen's Westminster and Civil Service Rifles, The Rangers, London Scottish 3rd City of London (Royal Fusiliers), London Irish, The East Surrey Regt., The Queen's (24th London), and 1st City of London Regt. (Royal Fusiliers).

The conditions of the competition for these two cups has been changed this year. They are now the chief prizes in the London Division (T.A.) Small Arms meeting. For many years there have been the bone of contention between the best teams of marksmen of the Regular and Territorial Armies in the London District. Difficulties in finding ammunition and money for the training of teams has led to the abandonment of an exacting, but very popular match, which involved a long advance at the double, as well as shooting with rifle and machine gun.

COLUMBIAN TEAM FOR OLYMPICS

Arrival At Village

"Hong Kong Daily Press" Special. Berlin, July 12. The Columbian team for the Olympic Games has now joined the inhabitants of the Olympic Village, having arrived at the Lehrter Bahnhof from Hamburg late on Saturday night. Despite the lateness of the hour the Columbians were given a cordial welcome by Dr. Ritter von Hall of the Olympic Committee and Lieutenant-Colonel Baron von zu Gilsa, Commander of the Olympic Village. Representatives of the Columbian Legation and many members of the Columbian colony in Berlin were present. This is the first time that Columbia takes part in the Olympic Games. The team consists of 17 members.

KHO SIN KIE BEATEN

Noordwyk, July 12. Kho Sin-kie, China's leading Davis Cup player made an unsuccessful attempt to win the Dutch singles tennis championship to-day.

He reached the final where he met Giorgio de Stefani the ambitious Italian. Stefani, with a wealth of experience behind him, plus natural ability, proved far too good for the young Chinese and won in straight sets.

The scores were 6-1, 6-3, 6-4.—Reuter.

training; there was no counterpart on the other side.

FOUR WOMEN'S MATCHES

Only four matches in the women's singles were on the card. Of each a Wimbledon finalist was the winner. Serving as I saw last year—that is, with the intention of scoring outright—Miss Helen Jacobs conceded only one game to Mlle. Goldschmidt.

Against a player who had beaten Miss Lyle this was an ominous achievement. The Comtesse de la Valdemer and Miss Round won almost as they pleased, but Mrs. Sperling, starting much less confidently, was 5-3 down against Miss Caroline Babcock, one of the Wightman Cup heroines.

Indeed, the German champion might easily have been in danger if her own access of pace had not corresponded with a marked decline in the Californian's play. Miss Babcock's earnest and accurate attack had drawn errors from Mrs. Sperling; in the second set she was "wrong footed" again and again.

YESTERDAY'S LAWN BOWLS

MORE GIANTS FALL BY THE WAYSIDE

In the Lawn Bowls Open Singles Championship A. E. Coates met P. E. Knight at the Hong Kong Football Club yesterday and the match was won by the former player with a score of 21 shots to 14. The game went to 20 heads. Coates led all the way.

Playing on the Civil Service Bowling Green in the Open Singles Championship, W. K. Way lost to J. Shepherd by the score of 19 shots to 21. This game went to 19 heads before it was decided.

At the Club de Recreio green yesterday afternoon the Open Pairs team of R. Duncan and S. Randle beat Souza and Field by 25-18.

A. Hyde-Lay beat H. F. Rozario, 21-9, at the Kowloon Dock. Rozario was leading by 7-0 at one time, but Hyde-Lay overcame this lead to match to an overwhelming victory.

H. A. Alves beat G. N. Mitchell, 21-9, at the Kowloon Cricket Club ground yesterday afternoon.

A close game was witnessed at the Kowloon Docks Recreation Club green yesterday when S. Bright and J. E. Henson beat J. S. Landolt and D. Rumsdahn by 22 shots to 21 in their Open Pairs Championship encounter.

The match between A. M. Omar (C.C.C.) and A. E. Carey (Police) scheduled to be played on the Tarkoo Dock green was called off due to the non-appearance of the latter player.

TENNIS RESULTS

The Kowloon Cricket Club lost to the Club de Recreio by 5-4 in the mixed doubles matches played at the latter's ground yesterday afternoon.

The final scores were:
A. V. Gossain and Miss O. M. Ribeiro (Recreio) drew with A. E. Grist and Mrs. A. J. Kew, 6-6.
lost to G. Clark and Mrs. McCaw, 3-6.
beat S. A. Gray and Miss G. White, 6-0.

C. A. Barretto and Miss A. Remedios (Recreio):
lost to A. E. Grist and Mrs. McCaw, 3-6.
beat S. A. Gray and Miss G. White, 6-2.

A. V. Remedios and Miss A. Roza (Recreio):

beat S. A. Gray and Miss White, 6-1.

MIXED DOUBLES
The U.S.R.C., on their home ground, lost to the C.R.C. by 6-3, in the mixed doubles tennis matches.

L. Goldman and Mrs. W. H. Wilson (U.S.R.C.):
beat W. C. Hung and Mrs. V. Litton, 6-1.
lost to Tsui Wai Pui and Mrs. C. C. Chui, 4-6.

beat Tsui Yun Pui and Miss R. Perry, 6-3.
A. L. Sullivan and Mrs. K. Holmes (U.S.R.C.):
beat W. C. Hung and Mrs. V. Litton, 6-4.
lost to Tsui Wai Pui, 1-6.
lost to Tsui Yun Pui, 3-6.

Mai L. Wilkinson and Mrs. R. Ashton (U.S.R.C.):
lost to W. C. Hung, 3-6.
lost to Tsui Wai Pui and Mrs. C. C. Chui, 1-6.
lost to Tsui Yun Pui and Miss R. Perry, 2-6.

HAPPY VALLEY GOLF

The semi-finals of the Happy Valley Summer Singles Golf Competition resulted as follows:
J. E. Richardson beat T. D. Patton by 5 and 4.
A. L. Powell beat A. J. Deans by 5 and 4.

EYSTON'S NEW RECORD

Bonneville (Utah), July 12. Captain George Eyston broke the 1,000-mile motor record here to-day, with a speed of approximately 161.5 miles per hour. This compares with the previous record of 144.93 miles per hour, held by John Cobb. Reuter.

OLYMPIC TRIALS IN AMERICA

Many Records Broken

New York, July 12.

At America's Olympic trials to-day, two negroes set a new world high jump record of six feet nine inches. They were Cornelius Johnson of Los Angeles and Daveal Britton of Ohio University.

In the final of the 3,000 metres, Harold Manning, of Kansas, ran the distance in nine minutes 8.2 seconds and in the 400 metres hurdles Glen Hardin of Louisiana made the distance in 51.4 seconds.

Glen Cunningham, another Kansas star, won the 1,500 metres in three minutes 49.9 seconds. Donald Dash, Indiana, was first in the 1,500 metres, his time being 15 minutes 4.2 seconds.

Archie Williams of California won the 400 metres, in 46.6 seconds, and the 110 metres hurdles went to Forest Towns, of Georgia in 14.3 seconds.

John Woodruff of Pittsburgh led the field in the 800 metres in 1 minute 51 seconds and Jesse Owens won the 200 metres in 12 seconds flat. This was a world record for the distance, with one bend.

Earle Meadows, Bill Sefton and Bill Graber, all of California, tied in the pole vault event at 14 feet 3 inches.

The javelin throw was won by Lee Bartlett of Detroit, with a distance of 221 feet 3 inches, and Jack Torrance of Louisiana put the quarter shot 51 feet 6 inches. Gordon Dunn of San Francisco was the discus throw winner, with a distance of 157 feet 7.5 inches.

Roland Romero of Louisiana won the hop-step-and-jump with a distance of 49 feet 9 inches.

Bill Bonthron, one of the favourites for the 1,500 metres, finished fourth and Ben Eastman, another potential champion, and one-time U. S. record-holder, was sixth in the 800 metres.—Reuter.

ANOTHER JAPANESE TRIUMPH

OARSMEN IMPRESS

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 24.

Is there no limit to the ability of the Japanese to copy the West and go one better in their process? Certainly the oarsmen gathering for Henley must be feeling pretty apprehensive after the astonishing performance of the Tokio eight at Marlow in beating three first-class English crews with apparent ease and producing spurts sometimes up to the staggering rate of 52—a rate never before seen in racing.

Before the race the sceptics poo-pooed. We were assured that the threat of the little men—each on an average two stone lighter than members of a British crew—was not worth expence-happenny. And as for their feather-weight boat—designed by "the best brains of Tokio University,"—the Thames pundits had seen other new-fangled devices apparently won in theory and be decisively scuttled in practice. Well, there can be no poo-pooing now. That astonishing Japanese patience and persistence seems to have energy enough left from the more obvious fields of commerce and war to spill out in the most unlikely directions. Cynics will be suggesting now that Oxford's best recipe for winning a boat-race would be to sack their rowing "hearties," pick out eight under-sized individuals, and set them to study the Japanese in all things. But when is the West going to reverse this general process of imitation and return the compliment? It would be agreeable to imagine (let us say) some English designer of miniature gardens displaying his skill in Nippon and causing the local practitioners to gnash their teeth in fury over the beauty and delicacy of his designs.

TRAGEDY IN KENNEDY ROAD HOUSE

Young Chinese Dies From Stab Wounds

CONCUBINE ALSO INJURED

The Criminal Investigation Department are investigating a stabbing affair which occurred at No. 32, Kennedy Road in the early hours of yesterday morning and which resulted in the death of Mr. Ng Yun-tong, 26, a well-known local resident, and serious stab wounds being inflicted on a young woman, Cheung Yee-lau, concubine of a well-known resident. There were no eye-witnesses of the incident.

According to a police report, a man visited the house at 7.30 a.m. but was not seen to enter the house. The front door had been unlocked earlier in the morning by the servants, as usual, and it was left open.

The first intimation of anything being amiss was when the servants heard groans coming from the concubine's bedroom. On entering the room they found her lying on the bed, clad in the same garments when she retired for the night, and bleeding profusely from the back. The man, Ng Yun-tong, was found lying on the floor near the bed suffering from a deep stab wound in the abdomen and other injuries. A long bladed knife was found lying beside the man.

Both Ng and the concubine were rushed to the Government Civil Hospital where the former's condition was found to be too grave for an operation and he died at 11.30 a.m. The woman was operated on and was reported to be progressing satisfactorily.

The police were informed and a C.I.D. party, which included Mr. T. Murphy, A.D.C.I., Chief Det-Insp. J. Murphy and Det-Insp. M. Murphy, proceeded to the scene of the crime and made enquiries.

The woman had seven female and two male servants to all of whom she was known as Cheung Kau. The servants occupied the basement. The deceased man lived in Bonham Road and was known to the servants in the woman's house as Sze Sul, and is said to have been on friendly terms with the concubine whom he had been in the habit of visiting frequently.

S'HAH INVADED BY BEGGAR ARMY

Two Injured When Over 30,000 Fight For Charity

EXPECTATION OF GIFTS FROM MR. YU YA-CHING

Shanghai, July 8. The crossing of Lloyd and Thibet Roads, a few steps from Nanking Road, one of the busiest streets in Shanghai, was packed to overflowing at dawn yesterday, when over 30,000 beggars fought their way to the Ningpo Residents Association in Thibet Road, in the hope of receiving twenty cents each from Mr. Yu Ya-ching, on the occasion of his seventieth birthday anniversary. Although there was no traffic to speak of at this hour, such huge crowds thronged the streets that contingents of police had to be called out to disperse them, for fear of an untoward happening. As a result of a general flight, which started on the arrival of the uniformed men, an aged man and woman were knocked down and had to be conveyed to hospital in an ambulance.

It was reported that hundreds of beggars received twenty cents each on Monday morning and this led to the belief that the distribution would be continued yesterday. Commencing in the early hours of the morning, beggars from all parts of Shanghai began to gather in front of the Ningpo Residents Association, where the birthday celebrations were concluded on Monday night. At 5 p.m., a part of Lloyd Road and also Thibet Road were so congested

SOUTHWEST LEADERS DENOUNCED

MILITARY HEADS ACCUSED OF CONSPIRACY

Air Officers' Circular To The Nation

Shanghai July 8.

The conspiracy of the military leaders of Kwangtung and Kwangsi with a certain foreign power in the present separatist movement has been alleged in a circular issued by over forty Cantonese air officers who joined the Central Government recently. The Kwangsi leaders are accused of having granted certain mining privileges in the province to the foreign power in return for a supply of arms and ammunition to be used against Nanking, while Gen. Chen Chitang is accused of having amassed a fortune of over $100,000,000 through heavy taxation, while the payment to the Kwangtung forces is six months overdue.

The telegram starts by directing the attention of the people of the whole country to the present crisis of foreign aggression and the Communist menace. Under such circumstances, the telegram says, the Central Government has laboured in the spirit of patience and perseverance for self-preservation. The sincerity shown by the Central Government in the suppression of the Communist menace, and in the strengthening of the national defence, with a view to the revival of the Chinese nation and race from its present humiliating position, it is pointed out, deserves the sympathy and support of all.

Generals Chen Chitang, Li Tsung-jen, and Pai Chung-hsi, the message continues, who hold the reins of government in the Southwest, suddenly raised the banner of rebellion with a total disregard of the wishes of the people. They have always stood in the way of national unification and care for nothing but their own ends, the telegram states.

ALLEGED EVIL DEEDS

The telegram then enumerates the alleged evil deeds of the Southwestern leaders. In 1931, it is recalled that Generals Chen, Li and Pai organized the two extraordinary political organizations which assumed a platform opposed to the Central Government in Nanking. It is further alleged they also sent Mr. Chen Chung-tu to Japan on a mission of a treacherous character. This, it is charged, might reasonably be considered the immediate factor contributing to the incident of September 18, 1931.

Even a child, the telegram continues, could penetrate the disguise of "anti-Japanism" under which the south-western rebels are pushing their military campaign against the Central Government. The telegram goes on to expose alleged negotiations with Japan by Kwangsi leaders for the supply of arms and ammunition and mentions as proof the fact that many Japanese advisers have been employed by the Kwangsi army.

The telegram charges the Cantonese army commanders with atrocities victimizing all those suspected of being loyal to the Central Government. It states that over 300 soldiers and ranking officers in the 6th Division, as well as many professors, several hundreds of students of the Chung Shan University, and forty students of the Whampoa Military Academy were detained. The executions of persons suspected of loyalty to the Central Government, it is alleged, have been a frequent occurrence in Canton.

Concluding, the forty Cantonese air officers announce their decision to join the Central Government and express the hope that their example will be followed by all those who are now being exploited by the rebels.—(N.C.D.N.)

ed that no pedestrian was able to move about in either street.

Police who were sent to the scene ably handled the situation, but soon after the injured man and woman had been conveyed to hospital, the beggars gathered again, only to be dispersed by the police once more. Several ambulances were called to the scene, but the services of only one of them were found necessary.—(N.C.D.N.)

DEFENCE POOL

OUR INDUSTRIAL RESOURCES.

We already know that Sir Thomas Inskip contemplates a much bigger interpretation of his functions than anything which has ever yet been attempted in peacetime. Just as in the words of Adml. Sir Herbert Richmond the role of the Imperial Defence College is to co-ordinate the collective fighting strength of the Empire for war, so the Minister of Defence intends to organize the industrial resources of the country in readiness to promptly meet the tremendous strain which war would forthwith impose. The talk about "conscripiting industry" and "mobilizing our resources" may be taken as mere political dialectics. Provision and provision are much better terms.

Actually, the Committee of Imperial Defence have been urging some such measure for many years past, but as they are only an "advisory" body, and as it is only quite recently that the Prime Minister, who has heretofore presided over them, has suddenly awakened to the startled perception that war is a very real possibility, precious little has been done. In as far as he is able effectually to "co-ordinate" the Fighting Forces and their sources of supply and maintenance, the Minister will certainly have the blessing of the General Staffs.

GREAT EXPERIMENT WILL WORK WELL.

There is thus a sufficiency of practical reasons for believing that this great experiment will work well. Of course, it will have to be shaped as it goes. Already, most of the preliminary misgivings have been dispelled. Knowing now fairly well what Sir Thomas Inskip will not do, the Services feel that the ground is cleared for a comfortable wait to see what he will do. I have never been impressed by the popular belief that he will "save the nation a lot of money." The nation cannot have battle-ships, battalions, nor aircraft without paying for them, and it is as clear as daylight that we must have more of all these things.

The time-wasting gibes from the Opposition benches about "lavish expenditure" and our never having received value for the hundreds of millions spent upon armaments, is all parrot-like bosh. With all our Defence Forces pared to the bone, not only in man-power, but in equipment, the one answer to the reproach of extravagance is that Opposition politics have resulted in the country having to pay so very much more for so very much less.

I have nothing whatever to say against a higher standard of living—the highest which our economic system will yield. But this has been the primary cause of that "poor value" for one thousand million pounds in the past ten years which Labour, having had the full benefit of it, throws up through its representatives in Parliament. The new armaments programme is to give a lot more employment (as it will), but the Opposition is almost pathetically anxious that industry shall make no profits out of which to meet its heavier wages bill.

The heart of a good cocktail.

STRIKE IMPRESSION IN SPAIN

Unity Of Movement Still Being Sought

SYNDICALISTS WIN IN BARCELONA

Red shirts and blue shirts marching in procession, a Leftist Government, agrarian reform; these are not the only signs of the "New Day" in Spain.

Far more spectacular than anything else has been the number of successful strikes culminating, for the present, in the Barcelona hundred per cent. hotel, cafe, restaurant and bar strike.

During that strike Barcelona was an unforgettable experience: a city of cafes without coffee; the kiosks in the Ramblas barricaded with their chairs; not a meal or any sort served in any hotel, from the Ritz to the simplest pension; not a bath, not a glass of sherry, not a sandwich—with one exception, writes Langdon Davies in the "Daily Herald."

The socialist Congress was holding its meetings and the Syndicalist Unions permitted enough waiters and cooks to work in order to serve it a banquet; but it was made a condition that all waiters were to be dressed in blue shirts and scarlet ties.

The unanimity took one's breath away: there is no such thing as a blackleg in a strike like this.

SEEKING AGREEMENT

One does not organise resistance to a strike in Spain, one locks up one's delegates in a room with the union delegates and waits until they have reached an agreement.

On the following day the waiters and cooks and chambermaids returned in full force, looking a little shy, and work went on as usual; the two sides having agreed to hand the matter over to the Government for arbitration.

The Englishman is apt to be surprised to find Spain one hundred per cent. organised in this way. In Spain a General Strike is the rule rather than the exception, there are as many strikes for the political purpose of making it impossible to run industry under the capitalist system as there are strikes for industrial purposes.

No other strike could have been arranged by the Syndicalists, from their own point of view, than this Barcelona catering strike; and no worse from the point of view of the political future of the Popular Front.

In the first place the conditions of labour are bad in many ways, so that there was an industrial excuse for trying to improve them; in the second place Barcelona is proud of its tourist and hotel trade and was paralysed by a wound in a vital spot.

CONDITIONS IMPROVED

The strike has improved conditions—it is a long time since a Spanish strike ended in anything but a victory for the workers, but it has also probably increased the number of "Fascists" and it has weakened the prestige of a left wing Government by showing that it is going to be increasingly difficult to prevent the Syndicalists holding a pistol at the head of industry.

More important than this, the increasing number of successful strikes will strengthen the Syndicalists against political labour; for in Spain, unlike in England, the political and industrial labour movements are not the same people organised differently for different purposes, they are rivals.

To the Marxian Socialist and the Communist it seems obvious that Syndicalism must give way to a movement to achieve revolution by political means, but it is quite possible that Spain may eventually show the world an attempt at a Syndicalist rather than a Communist revolution.

TASK MADE HARD

Meanwhile the task of both the Spanish and the Catalan Governments is being made harder, and especially that of the latter, for although the Syndicalists in the rest of Spain are drawing nearer the political labour movements, this is not so in Catalonia.

There the battle is still between a Liberal bourgeois Government obsessed by the ideal of nationalism, and as little concerned with social revolution as the Irish in 1916, and the non-political Syndicalist; whereas in Madrid one sees the Red Flag everywhere, in Barcelona one sees the rival Separatist

JAPAN REJECTS NAVAL TREATY

Tonnage And Gun Calibres

Tokio, June 23.

The Japanese Government to-day decided to notify Britain formally that it will not adhere to the London Three-Power Naval Treaty. This was signed by Britain, France and the United States in March.

The Japanese decision is apparently based on the view that the treaty's clauses limiting tonnage and gun calibres are unacceptable.

The battleship tonnage was fixed at 30,000 tons with 14 in. guns for four years. Cruisers were limited to 8,000 tons and submarines to 2,000 tons.

the scene at 8 o'clock, but it took 1 1/2 hours before the flames finally were extinguished. The part of the building near the staircase was gutted but several of the bedrooms on the upper storey were saved by a stout centre wall.

Fire extinguishing operations were conducted by Capt. J. Gordon Dyson, Chief Officer of the Shanghai Fire Brigade (N.C.D.N.)

ONE KILLED AND ONE INJURED IN FIRE

Several Others Rescued

DISCARDED CIGARETTE BELIEVED CAUSE

Shanghai, July 8.

A Russian woman is lying in hospital seriously injured and a Chinese servant has died following a disastrous fire at 481 Kiangse Road, a house occupied by several foreign women, in the early hours of yesterday morning. Miss E. Manarenko, the injured woman, aged 25 years, in order to escape the flames jumped 20 feet to the ground from a balcony. She was taken to the General Hospital, suffering from a fractured spine, legs, and wrist.

Four other women had a narrow escape. With the staircase a roaring inferno, they clustered, scantily clad, on the balcony, shouting, and were rescued by a caretaker of the Shanghai Waterworks Co., who brought a ladder and propped it against the balcony. Others were taken from their perilous position by firemen.

The Chinese servants of the house got out by the back of the building. Tsze Vol-ling, the dead man, was the one exception. He, on account of the warm weather, was not sleeping in the servants' quarters but on a landing. Finding himself trapped by the flames, he made a dash down the staircase, was severely burned and died later in the Lester Chinese Hospital.

Four other women, who live in the house, were fortunate to be away at the time of the fire. They, including the owner, had driven out to the Rubicon Inn. On their arrival, they learned by telephone that the house was on fire and returned immediately.

The fire is believed to have started on the ground floor, possibly caused by a discarded cigarette. With a through draught from the basement up to the first floor by the staircase, in a short while flames and smoke were pouring up the staircase. Five fire engines from Central and Tiendong Road stations were on

MUTUAL GREETINGS EXCHANGED

Berlin, July 12.

Replying to a telegram of greeting from Dr. Schuschnigg on the occasion of the conclusion of the Austro-German agreement, Herr Hitler expressed the hope that the agreement would restore the traditional relations which had grown from social unity and century-old history, in order to pave the way for further joint activity for the benefit of the two German nations and the strengthening of the peace of Europe.

The newspapers comment on Germany's good relations with Italy.

RADIATOR CAP

The Rev. Father Horace de Angelis, of the Rosary Church, Kowloon, appeared at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday as complainant in a charge of larceny levied against an unemployed youth, 17 years of age, before Mr. E. Hims-worth. The youth, Li Sang was charged with stealing a radiator cap from car No. 1536 at Chatham Road on July 12. A fine of $5 with the alternative of two weeks' imprisonment was imposed. Detective Sergeant Haynes appeared for the prosecution.

Mineral deficiency ## stands between you and REAL HEALTH

One small defect impairs the efficiency of the most perfect piece of mechanism. And that applies to nature's masterpiece—your body. If the cells are starved ill-health follows. Calcium is the one vital mineral without which the life centre of the body cells would shrivel and die, and Kalzana supplies this element in a form which the system can easily assimilate and retain.

By remedying this deficiency and making the cell-nucleus plump and strong, Kalzana gets right to the root of ill health. Kalzana improves the condition of the blood, strengthens the whole body and supplies the teeth with the elements they need to keep them hard and white and immune from decay. A course of Kalzana quickly gives new strength and vigour—begin yours to-day.

"I am never without Kalzana, not taking them always, but at any time of extra strain, and when there are colds and other infections about."

Miss A. M. Wolverhampton.
